Sit-Down Called Armed Rebellion

Rep. Hoffman Declares President Gets Orders From C. I. O. Head.

The Labor Situation.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins conferred with Walter Chrysler in New York in an effort to settle the strikes in Chrysler automobile plants in Detroit.

Bloodshed Feared.

By Sidney Olson.

Grimly facing the possibility of bloodshed at Detroit, center of sit-down strikes, Congressmen in both houses battled all day yesterday over the problem, calling names, demanding Government action, and attempting to fix the blame for the crisis.

In the Senate the traditional champion of the underdog, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, rose to assert that while sit-down strikers are "fighting for what they deem to be their rights in an economic system which is dominated by lawlessness because the Government does not enforce the law on the statute books."

In opening the long and tense discussion, which was heard by a grave and attentive Senate in strong contrast to recent sleepy sessions, Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, blasted John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, as "a traitor to American ideals," and "a menace to the peace and prosperity of our Nation."

"Armed Rebellion."

In the House, Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, shouted: "We have a state of armed rebellion.

"The President is the boss of Congress, all right. But who does he get his orders on labor from? He gets them from John L. Lewis."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, breaking his silence on the sit-down issue, holding to a middle course, counseled quietly: "We know too well that anything said about sit-down strikes falls with fateful emphasis at this moment in Michigan.

"In Michigan we confront a condition and not a theory. The prudent answer to it during the next 24 hours may determine matters literally of life and death.

"It is no moment of criticism of anybody or anything, or abuse of anybody or anything.

"So far as the labor front, where the issue now stands naked, is concerned, it is above all else, a moment for the coolest counsel.

"Such matters cannot be successfully settled with guns and bayonets."

Vandenberg particularly asked that "law and order prevail," and thereafter "let the grievances of labor be sympathetically assessed, and generously and equitably corrected."

Urge Support of Law.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, meanwhile adopted a resolution calling upon its membership to "lend every possible support and encouragement to all Government officials in performing their sworn obligation to preserve law and order." The resolution held "forcible seizure and occupation of property by sit-down strikers" to be inconsistent with chamber principles.

In the House, Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, indirectly slapped at Majority Leader

Man Descended From Apes, Jesuit Says Evidence Proves

But Father de Chardin, Noted Geologist, Feels There Need Be No Difficulty for Christianity Over Discoveries.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, March 19.—Father Teilhard de Chardin, Jesuit scholar, one of the most eminent geologists in the world, today presented an international gathering of scientists with evidence which he said showed that man must be considered as descending from apes.

"But," he said, "in these discoveries there need be no difficulty for Christianity. As a scientist I must admit the evidence that man was born from the animal kingdom. But he was not an animal. The great, the tremendous, the significant fact about man is the coming of thought with and through him."

Father de Chardin brought to this country for the first time the exhibits, photographs and studies of the discovery near Pleping of Sinanthropus, a primitive man who lived hundreds of thousands of years ago.

He spoke at the international symposium on early man, the first conference of its kind ever held, sponsored by the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia.

Sinanthropus, he said, is the "third stage" found in tracing backward man's prehistory. The first, he explained, is modern man. The second stage is the Neanderthal type, a man whose skull and stature were different.

This third man, Sinanthropus, had a head different from either of his successors. Differences in width and length of skull are the striking points, Father de Chardin explained. Modern man's skull is widest above the ears. Sinanthropus' head is widest exactly at the opening of the ears. Modern man's head is egg-shaped, Sinanthropus' arch-shaped.

The longest dimension of modern man's head, he continued, is from the brow just above the nose to the occiput, the round bone which can be felt at the back of the head. At the back Sinanthropus' differed. Below the occiput bump this primitive

Judges Balk At Testifying On Court Plan

2 More Law Professors Back President; Black, Borah in Hot Debate.

By Robert C. Albright.

Efforts to bring Supreme Court justices before the Senate Judiciary Committee to testify on the President's court plan collapsed yesterday, as the Administration continued to draw on the law schools for support of its program.

Senate court plan opponents received informal word that members of the high bench prefer not to testify. The opposition had been hopeful of leading off next week's rebuttal testimony with one or more of the justices.

As two more law school professors presented arguments in favor of court remodeling, the Judiciary Committee by resolution called on the clerk of the Supreme Court for information on the state of its docket, authoritatively understood to be well up to date.

May Refer to Justices.

Although personal appearance of any of the justices appeared to be out of the picture, it was indicated the committee later might address requests for information directly to the justices. If such a course is followed, it was said, the communication would deal with specific court problems and not with the general sweep of the President's court plan.

While the committee for five hours questioned Administration witnesses on the judiciary program, the court fight broke out afresh on the floor of the Senate. Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama criticized conflicting constitutional interpretations by the court majority. He was answered by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, with a plea for rewriting of the fourteenth amendment to restrict the "due process" clause to procedural cases.

Retired Justice to Speak.

Although present court justices remained aloof from the fray, Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson announced in the Senate that John Hessin Clarke, only living retired Supreme Court justice, will deliver a radio speech on the court bill Monday night.

Robinson did not say which side the retired justice would take on the issue, but his announcement raised the assumption he would be for it. Court plan opponents had understood otherwise, they said. Clarke will speak from San Diego, Calif., at 9 o'clock. James M. Cox, former Democratic Governor of Ohio and Presidential candidate in 1920, will introduce him from Miami.

The Administration's committee defense of the court plan was led off yesterday by William Draper Lewis, of the American Law Institute, former dean of the Pennsylvania University Law School. Lewis said the Constitution needs to be interpreted in the light of "twentieth century facts and social concepts." He said the President's plan would accomplish this result.

"It is more conservative than amending the commerce or due process of law clauses, or adopting legislation which would deprive the Supreme Court of any of its present powers, or making an adverse vote of more than a majority of the court necessary to annul an act of Congress," Lewis said.

Brant, Pecora to Speak.

Later the committee heard Dr. Charles Grove Haines, University of California at Los Angeles law professor, testify that the President's court plan would "assure a return to the principles of constitutional construction which prevailed with only a few exceptions during the first century of our experience as a Nation under the Federal Constitution."

Assisting in preparing the Administration witness schedules was Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General. Also present at one informal conference between Chairman Ashurst and Keenan was Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, reputed to have had a part in the writing of the President's court bill.

Irving Brant, St. Louis editorial writer and author, will appear before the committee this morning, and this afternoon Judge Ferdinand Pecora, of New York, former Senate member of the stock exchange inquiry, will conclude the Administration's opening case. Dean Charles E. Clark, of the Yale University law school, was to have testified yesterday. Lengthy questioning of Haines and Lewis forced a postponement.

The opposition will lead off with Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, Monday, and follow Tuesday with Raymond Moley, former adviser to the President.

Rebels Routed On Wide Front At Guadalajara

10-Mile Advance Reported by Madrid; Gajanejos Recaptured.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 19.—Government forces advanced 10 miles along the main Guadalajara highway today against crumbling opposition as the insurgents fled in disorder, Gen. Jose Miaja, government commander for central Spain, announced tonight.

Gen. Miaja asserted his troops had taken Gajanejos, on the highway 22 miles northeast of Guadalajaua, without firing a shot.

He reported government forces had recaptured more than half the territory along the Guadalajara road which the insurgents had occupied in their offensive which began early last week with the objective of completing the encirclement of Madrid.

Officers of the Madrid high command said they considered the success of the counter offensive on the Guadalajara front constituted one of the most significant victories of the war.

"Glorious days of triumph have begun for the republic," declared Gen. Miaja in a speech tonight.

Government artillery, from regained heights north of Brihuega, about 44 miles northeast of Madrid, harassed the retreating columns with heavy cannon fire, dispatches said.

Communiques said government "clean-up squads" captured more than 200 prisoners, many of them from hiding places in basements of the war-torn village.

Most of the war captives, advices from the front said, were Italians.

Britain Calls Parley.

London, March 19 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden called ambassadors of five nations to a conference today in an effort to smooth out a new dispute between Russia and Portugal over operation of the Spanish non-intervention scheme.

Africa Mine Blast Kills 40, Injures 20

Johannesburg, South Africa, March 19 (AP).—Forty native miners were killed today and 33 were missing in a gas explosion in the Simmer Jack gold mine in the Germiston region, near Johannesburg. Twenty others were in a critical condition when brought to the surface.

Miss Earhart's Plane Is Faulty, Engineers Find

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, March 19.—Engineers found "a potential disaster" threat in Amelia Earhart's $80,000 flying laboratory today, but failed to deter her in preparing for one of the most dangerous phases of her projected aerial dash around the world.

Wilbur Thomas, motor expert, said an examination disclosed the propeller bearings were almost dry when she sped in to Honolulu yesterday at the finish of a record flight from Oakland.

He asserted the condition might have forced Miss Earhart down at sea had she taken off yesterday as originally planned on the lap to tiny Howland Island, 1,532 miles to the southwest, never before covered by an airplane.

Poor Lubrication Seen.

The expert, who came here especially to check the plane's motors, said improper lubricants at Oakland, starting point of the world flight, caused the dangerous situation.

To assure a daytime landing at unlighted Howland Island, Miss Earhart decided late today to begin her hop about 1 a. m. tomorrow (6:30 a. m. Eastern standard time) if the weather is favorable.

Howland offered a challenge to Miss Earhart and her navigators, Harry Ling and Fred Noonan, but they had the assistance of two naval vessels.

Howland is a sandbar scarcely two miles long and half a mile wide. It stands only three or four feet above sea level at high tide.

Two hundred miles out of Honolulu, the Coast Guard cutter Taney stood by, ready to give directions, weather reports or other necessary aid.

Selected Night Trip.

At about the halfway point stood the Navy minesweeper Quail, also ready for similar duty, and at the little island waited the Coast Guard cutter Shoshone.

Miss Earhart and her navigators deliberately chose to tackle the unblazed trail to Howland at night so they could have the stars as navigation aids.

They expected to reach the tiny spot in 10 to 12 hours.

Despite its physical insignificance, Howland assumed a place of importance a few months ago when the Government began developing a landing field on it as a possible stepping stone in an air route to the antipodes.

Traffic Fatalities Here Drop; Children Break Safety Laws

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

There hasn't been a traffic fatality in the District for more than a week.

Earlier this month, there was an average of one accident death every other day.

And although several persons were injured seriously yesterday, the new safety patrol failed to observe a flagrant law infraction or outstanding example of careless driving.

Major instances of carelessness encountered by Traffic Policeman George M. Patton, the "safety officer," involved children. Two youngsters on First street northwest alarmed motorists by grabbing the rear end of a swiftly moving truck.

Clinging to the vehicle as it gathered speed after stopping for a "stop" sign, the children became frightened when they realized their legs wouldn't move fast enough to keep up. They were unable to hoist themselves into the truck.

Both Boys Fall.

Then one of them tripped. He lost his grip and tumbled head over heels into the gutter. The other one released his hands and fell flat on his face. Luckily, both escaped injury and oncoming motorists were able to avoid striking them.

Policeman Patton stopped the patrol car to give the youngsters a bit of advice. Apparently realizing the danger in what they had done, however, the boys fled as soon as they saw the policeman.

It wasn't 10 minutes later when the patrol car passed a school and came to a sudden halt as a little girl darted into the street. She was laughing and thought nothing of her reckless act. Patton called her over to the car.

"Won't Do It Again."

"Little girl," he said, "haven't your father and mother told you not to play in the streret?"

"No, sir, answered the child.

"Don't they tell you to be careful when crossing the street?" Patton asked.

"No, sir—I mean yes, sir," responded the frightened girl.

"Don't be afraid—we are trying to help you," Patton continued. "Now, hasn't someone told you it is dangerous to play in the street?"

"Yes, sir, my teacher—honest, I won't do it again."

Patton then told the youngster to tell all of her friends to remain on the playground during recess.

Meanwhile as a further safety move parking restrictions on nine streets will be made more rigid under proposed amendments to the traffic code which were approved yesterday by Commissioner Melvin

High Kiev Official Demoted by Reds

Moscow, March 19 (AP).—Reports of Communist Party difficulties in the Ukraine were confirmed today with disclosure that Paul Postisheff, secretary of the Kiev party committee, had been demoted.

Postisheff is one of the top-ranking Bolshevists.

The Kiev committee severely criticized the work of past years. It charged former officials with failure to expose enemies of the party who were holding responsible positions. The action was held significant in view of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's recent Nurnberg speech in which he mentioned the desirability of the Ukraine.

Gas Pockets in Building Walls And Inadequate Ventilation Blamed for School Disaster

Expert Says Children Were 'Blown to Death,' Not Burned; Mounting Toll May Reach 600.

LAST BODIES ARE REMOVED; MASS CEREMONIES PLANNED

Driving Rain Delays Work; 3 Inquiries Begun; Red Cross Mobilizes; Sheriff Kills Man Crazed by Reports.

By the Associated Press.

New London, Tex., March 19.—Evidence of deadly gas chambers in classroom walls of the London Consolidated School was found by a State investigator today as 1,000 men finished bringing from the explosion-shattered wreckage the twisted bodies of 425 children and their teachers.

Dr. E. P. Schoch, University of Texas chemistry professor, rated as an expert on gas explosions, sent here by Gov. James V. Allred to find the cause of the Nation's worst school disaster, declared: "The explosion came from either the basement or the hollow tile walls, which were excellent gas chambers."

Radiators Defective.

He inspected the tangled wreckage and asserted he found many of the gas radiators lacked proper flues.

Of six radiators left intact after the explosion, Dr. Schoch said he found only one with a satisfactory vent.

"The walls were filled with gas that had no exit," he said. "Then there was a spark, and the walls burst.

His findings spurred investigation of the disaster.

A military court of National Guardsmen—set up by Gov. Allred—assembled here and Ross Maddox, general contractor for "the world's wealthiest school," and E. M. Roberts, electrician of construction of the building, were called to testify.

72 Radiators Installed.

Capt. Z. E. Coombes, of the National Guard, who accompanied Dr. Schoch on his inspection trip, said he had talked with the architects and contractors of the building and added that they reported the installation of radiators was the same throughout the structure.

There were 72 radiators each individually gas-fired, in the building, 36 on each floor.

School Superintendent W. C. Shaw—who lost a son in the tragedy—had said he believed seeping gas from the adjacent oil fields caused the blast.

Assistant Fire Chief J. J. Lynn, at Oklahoma City, said seeping gas collecting in recesses of buildings is an ever-present menace in the oil fields.

Last Bodies Removed.

While the investigation progressed, weary workmen who toiled through the night and day, burrowing in the wreckage for bodies, completed their task late today. Col. E. E. Parker, commander of the National Guard forces holding the territory under martial law, announced:

"The job is finished. We estimate 425 bodies were lifted from the ruins—maybe more."

A larger estimate of the dead was made by Capt. Walter Elliott, of the State highway patrol, who said, "The nearest estimate on deaths at present is between 500 and 600."

Flares Give Weird Glow.

Gas flares from the forest of oil derricks surrounding the community cast an eerie light tonight over a scene of quiet strangely at contrast with the frenzied activity last night when rescue workers tore at the wreckage.

Bereaved parents laid plans for mass and individual funeral services for their children.

A group service for an undetermined number was planned at the New London Baptist Church tomorrow, and there was the possibility of a mass service at Henderson.

The rain which pelted down on searchers in their last hours of labor ceased tonight.

Driving rain in the early morning made the final few hours of work of digging for bodies difficult. Workers, stripped to the waist, passed bricks and debris along a hand-to-hand chain, using peach baskets.

Footing was easy on the rocky surface, but huge trucks had no traction on the rain-sodden ground and cables snapped frequently with beams in midair. Youngsters dart-

'Richest Little Town in World' Beggared by School Shambles

By Henry McLemore.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New London, Tex., March 19.—Tonight the "richest little town in the world" was the poorest.

This tiny city sprawls over almost the exact center of what men have called the richest strip of earth in all the world. Beneath it, bubbling and gurgling, crawls a river of the black gold that is oil.

Twenty-five thousand derricks, each a marker for a well, lift their gaunt heads in and about it. Twenty-five thousand sand-flares, each a guarantee that the well over which it sheds its crimson light is flowing, burn night and day.

But tonight the derricks stood not as symbols of fabulous wealth, but as markers for the dead, and the flares were funeral torches for the hundreds of children who perished in the schoolhouse catastrophe which has no equal in the history of the United States.

Oil-town folk are hard folk. Literary realists have portrayed them many and many a time as

Backers Order Drive Extended For Symphony

Campaign Will Continue to Wednesday Noon; $45,000 Short of Goal.

With $45,000 yet to be raised if they are to reach their $110,000 goal, workers in the National Symphony Orchestra sustaining fund campaign yesterday voted by acclamation to extend their drive through the first of next week.

Meeting for their fourth report luncheon in the Hamilton Hotel, division chairmen brought in new contributions of more than $12,000 to bring the campaign total of $64,782.

"Our job is not yet done for two reasons," Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, campaign chairman, told the 200 leaders and workers. "We haven't reached our goal—and we haven't made contacts with all the people who, we are sure, are friends of the orchestra. Do we wish to finish the job?"

A loud chorus of "yeas" from the floor answered her challenge.

The work of solicitation, it was announced, will be continued over the week-end and through Wednesday noon, when a final report meeting is scheduled in the Hamilton.

The $64,000 total, reported yesterday, brings the sustaining fund to within $2,000 of the total amount received at the close of the 1936 campaign, Harold A. Brooks, campaign vice chairman, told the workers.

The Navy committee, headed by Mrs. Emory S. Land, already has gone over the top, having exceeded its $1,750 quota by nearly $200, it was reported yesterday. Mrs. Land turned in $596.75 in new gifts bringing her committee total to $1,940. A $100 gift from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was listed among the new contributions.

Babson Expert Predicts Woman President in U.S.

Boston, March 19 (AP).—Asserting women already own 70 per cent of the Nation's private wealth, Ralph B. Wilson, vice president of Babson's Reports, Inc., tonight predicted that they would eventually own all of it and that a woman "some day" would sit in the White House "if present tendencies continue."

Gratified as Congress Approves Enabling Legislation.

In his first public word since an exchange of correspondence with President Roosevelt several months ago, Andrew Mellon yesterday expressed "happiness" that Congress had accepted his gift of a National Gallery of Art.

"I am happy Congress has passed the enabling legislation that makes possible the establishment of a National Gallery of Art," stated Mellon.

"This permits the building to be started shortly and I trust within the next two years the gallery and the works of art which I have brought together will be made available to the public."

It took more than 30 years for Mellon to form the collection he is giving to the people of the United States.

Since their purchase many of the masterpieces have more than doubled in value, so that recognized appraisers now estimate they are worth more than $50,000,000.

In addition, the former Secretary of the Treasury will finance a gallery costing more than $10,000,000. He also will provide an endowment of $5,000,000 for the salaries of certain gallery officials and future art acquisitions.

Beauty Claims French Premier As Well as Duce Among Friends

By the United Press.

Paris, March 19.—The case of exotic Madeleine de Fontanges, who shot the Count de Chambrun because "he ruined my idyl with Mussolini," threatened tonight to become an international scandal when she was revealed to have been friendly with a former premier of France.

Police revealed her friendship with the former premier, said to have been famous in international affairs, but refused to identify him. Nor would they say whether his name was contained in a lurid diary seized from Mme. Fontanges' apartment, the walls of which were covered with photographs of Premier Benito Mussolini.

The Italian Ambassador, Vittorio Cerutti, conferred tonight with Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos at the Quai d'Orsay, supposedly to ask what had been learned from the diary.

Police said the woman formerly was a stenographer at the foreign office.

Influential quarters were said to be exerting pressure to hush up the shooting of Chambrun, former Am-

Spring to Arrive At 7:45 P.M. Today With Light Rains

Ushered in by mild temperatures and occasional light rains, spring will arrive officially here this evening at 7:45 o'clock.

Yesterday was a fitting prelude for balmy times to come. Light breezes fanned the city, and the mercury climbed to 57 at 3 p. m. Beer trucks rumbled through the streets with loads of bock.

Bandit Gets $350 At Liquor Store

A tall, well-dressed bandit last night robbed Samuel Ableman, 49, of 4205 Arkansas avenue northwest, who operates a liquor store in the 1200 block of Thirteenth street northwest, of $350.

The robber entered the store where Ableman and a clerk were waiting on a customer. He brandished a nickel-plated revolver and herded Ableman and the other two men into the rear. From Ableman's pocket he took $50 and from the cash register he took $300.

As he was leaving another customer entered and asked if he might use the phone. The robber covered him and forced him also into the back room. He then escaped into the crowds outside.

Oklahoma City Parents Urge Gas Protection

School Officials Order Daily Inspections in Oil Well Area.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, March 19.—Worried parents besieged school officials here tonight with requests to do something about the menace of gas pockets in the derrick-studded East Side residential old field district.

C. K. Reiff, superintendent of Oklahoma City schools, ordered all school engineers to make a daily inspection for seeping gas here, where hundreds of oil wells fringe the city.

City Manager F. G. Baker was authorized by the Oklahoma City council to increase his staff of oil field inspectors.

Thirteen Oklahoma City school buildings lie in the oil fields. Oil derricks rise on the playgrounds of four schools.

"Gas collects in pockets even in well-ventilated buildings and along highways," said J. J. Lynn, assistant Oklahoma City fire chief, "to be touched off by a match, a spark, or a bit of flame from an open exhaust."

Lynn said several motorists had been killed or injured in Oklahoma by accidentally ignited gas pockets along highways.

The assistant fire chief said the menace of gas explosions depended upon atmospheric conditions. When those conditions are right, ignition of gas pockets means disaster.

"The gas seeps through the ground," Lynn said, "sometimes for hundreds of feet before it escapes in the air. It often escapes into basements and stays there in pockets for days or weeks."

Henderson, Tex., March 19 (AP).—New London's track team was to have come here for a meet this afternoon—but most of the high school athletes came to the town's funeral home instead. Only two members escaped death in the explosion yesterday.

Peace Program Of Americas Is Cited to Europe

Secretary Hull Envisions Possibility of Parley to End 'Chaos.'

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of State Hull has urged upon politically "chaotic" Europe the same kind of international program as was drafted by the 21 American nations at Buenos Aires last December, it was revealed yesterday.

As a result, the vision of a world gathering at which problems besetting nations of the globe might be threshed out, a conference in which President Roosevelt is reported to be greatly interested, was thought by some to have taken on greater substance.

In his testimony before a House Appropriations subcommitteee, just made public, Secretary Hull told the committee he had made the suggestion to "a gentleman from a European country, a prominent statesman," to whom he had traced the steps leading to the All-American Peace Conference and accomplishments of the conference.

Urged Similar Plan.

"So I said," the Secretary told the committee, "why cannot you European statesmen at least attempt this kind of a movement? Why just sit still and float on with a hopelessly unsound economic situation, with a hopelessly disturbed, not to say chaotic, political situation; why not make this effort?"

Proceedings of the sub-committee hearings were made public with the full Appropriations Committee's report of a bill providing appropriations totaling $121,222,000 for the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor Departments during the next fiscal year, beginning July 1.

The State Department was given $17,763,000, a decrease of $1,180,000 from current appropriations; Justice got $39,425,000, a decrease of $1,931,-125; Commerce $40,451,000, an increase of $4,731,780, and Labor $23,-583,000, a boost of $1,798,300.

Discussing the Buenos Aires program of promoting economic, political and cultural progress by peaceful means, Secretary Hull said at the hearings:

"At least we have sought to set an example and to offer encouragement at a time of very serious disturbance in many parts of the world, as well as to offer a practical program that can be followed."

Says Time Propitious.

Earlier, the Secretary had stressed the point that "the time is more and more propitious for a general movement in the direction of the worthwhile objectives, which we have been preaching and in which some countries are likewise interesting themselves."

Secretary Hull presented a serious picture of international relationships. "Many worth-while international relationships have been neglected, flouted or abandoned," he said. "There has been a tendency among nations to drift apart and into conditions of less mutual understanding, less real friendliness toward each other, and less effort to co-operate for common progress."

Of the State Department's activities with regard to this situation, he said:

"We have striven to keep these conditions constantly in mind, and we have endeavored to arrest this disastrous trend, insofar as we appropriately could.

"We have constantly preached the necessity for the re-establishment of international law wherever it has been abandoned, ignored or violated by governments or nations."

Is Applicable Elsewhere.

Relating his conversation with the European statesman, Hull said, of the Buenos Aires conventions:

"Ninety-five per cent of this program was equally applicable to other regions and other parts of the world, or all parts of the world."

And he later added:

"I think you gentlemen will find that as we go along the work of the Buenos Aires Conference, the principles it proclaimed to the world, will reveal themselves in probably broader aspects than ever has been recognized up to the present time."

Regarding neutrality legislation, the Secretary was asked what effect the various mandatory and discretionary embargo proposals would have on his reciprocal trade policy. Representative Bacon (Republican), of New York, suggested that "if we make an embargo mandatory and too rigid, the other countries in time of peace will try to find other sources for their needs and we will suffer very materially in our trade with them."

Admits Possibility.

To which the Secretary replied:

"That is possible. As I said, our attitude, so far, has been one of suggesting authority to exercise some discretion in dealing with certain of these phases. * * *

"Naturally, I feel that we should preserve none of these war-breeding dangers in the way of neutral rights that we have been exercising and which have gotten us into serious trouble. But that does not mean that in case of war we must look for a storm cellar somewhere and abandon all neutral rights, which may be and have been violated by belligerents over a period of centuries, thereby allowing such rights to be destroyed. If we do that, the next thing we know the belligerents would be ordering us around as though we were menials. We must take a broad view of the situation and maintain neutrality as far as practical, but let us not delude ourselves with the idea that it is a sure guarantee of keeping out of war. It only goes so far."

Sponsors Chosen For 2 Destroyers

Sponsors for two Navy destroyers to be launched late this year were named yesterday by Secretary of the Navy Swanson. They are Miss Virginia Lee Maury Werth, Allentown, Pa., who will sponsor the U. S. S. Maury, and Mrs. Simpson, of Baltimore, who will sponsor the U. S. S. Sterett.

Miss Werth is the great-granddaughter of Commander Matthew Fontaine Maury, for whom the destroyer will be named. Although it is scheduled for completion in late December, no launching date has been set.

Mrs. Simpson is the widow of Rear Admiral Edward Simpson. The destroyer is named in honor of her great-uncle, Lieut. Andrew Sterett. The vessel probably will be completed the middle of June, but no launching date has been announced.

Success in General Motors Strike Held Responsible for Sit-Down Movement.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN view of the increasing gravity of the situation resulting from the spread of sit-down strikes and the efforts of some New Dealers to make capital out of this situation on behalf of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court program, it may be informative to review the records to ascertain where the responsibility for this disturbing movement rests.

WALTMAN.

The essence of the sit-down strike is the seizure of an employer's property by his workers in order to force him to negotiate with their representatives regarding wages, working hours and similar matters. Thus, the employer is forced to enter negotiations with a gun at his head, as it were. Such is the technique of the sit-down strike.

In this country we first witnessed the exercise of this new instrument of labor last fall in several unimportant strikes. The first test of the success of the technique of the sit-down strike came against the General Motors Corporation. Had that sit-down strike failed, it is unlikely Capitol Hill and the country today would be disturbed by sit-down strikes.

Consequently the case facts of the General Motors sit-down strike are a very important chapter in labor history in this country, as well as in the history of this movement. This strike started near the end of December in the Fisher body division plants of General Motors, under auspices of the United Automobile Workers of America, one of John L. Lewis' C. I. O. unions.

In the beginning, at least, the sit-down strike was engineered by a minority of the automobile workers in the plants affected. Subsequently the sit-down strike spread rather generally through the General Motors plants in Detroit and Mr. Lewis toward the end claimed a majority of the workers were union members.

A few days after the sit-down strike got under way, General Motors officials sought and obtained an injunction for the ouster of the striking workmen from the plants they were occupying. The strikers refused with jeers to heed the orders of the sheriff to vacate the plants under the court order. The sheriff declined to use violence without bench warrants against the men.

The situation dragged on a for a day or two and then it was revealed that the judge who had issued the injunction was a General Motors stockholder. When that fact became known General Motors officials abandoned their immediate efforts to have the court order enforced.

Meanwhile, the sit-down strike grew in extent, and Washington officialdom made overtures of intervention. Labor Department conciliafors, however, were confronted by the refusal of General Motors officials to meet with the union representatives as long as the workers held the plants. In the middle of January, Gov. Frank Murphy and the Labor Department conciliators prevailed on the union chieftains to agree to have the sit-down strikers leave the plants, with negotiations beginning two hours after the plants were evacuated.

This agreement fell through when the union chieftains accused General Motors of breaking faith by entering another understanding to negotiate with a second organization as well as the U. A. W. After that the sit-down strike went on, with the conciliators unsuccessfully trying to get workers and employers together.

Finally, Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, and several of his aides were prevailed upon to confer in Washington with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The automobile magnates ended this conference by leaving the city after Mr. Lewis publicly had suggested the President owed it to labor, as a result of the latter's activities in the campaign, to intervene in the situation in order that the Roosevelt objectives might be achieved.

The strike had now entered its most crucial period. Observers generally were of the opinion that the strike would be decided one way or another within a few days. Secretary Perkins, who insisted that the legality of sit-down strikes had not been determined, several days later called on Mr. Sloan and his assistants to meet in her office "without condition or prejudice."

On the ground that he would not enter negotiation of the demands made by the automobile workers while they "continue to hold our plants unlawfully," Mr. Sloan declined to accede to Miss Perkins' invitation. Whatever might be thought of the wisdom of Mr. Sloan's action from the viewpoint of public psychology, he certainly was within his rights and raised a momentous issue in regard to the whole situation.

And then came the stroke which many observers believe assured the success of the General Motors sit-down strike, and perhaps of subsequent strikes of that nature. President Roosevelt very sharply and publicly rebuked Mr. Sloan for refusing to accede to the Perkins invitation, contending that the Secretary of Labor was the President's representative in such matters.

No responsible man of affairs can afford to ignore or flout the President under such circumstances. Mr. Sloan came to Washington, conferred with Miss Perkins, apparently declined to accede to suggestions she made and returned to New York. But the stage had been set in favor of the sit-down strikers and against Mr. Sloan and General Motors. So strengthened were the strikers in their possession of the automobile plants that it was found impossible to enforce a second court order without the spilling of blood. In the end, General Motors capitulated and the strike was settled.

It is true that at no time has the President or any member of his Cabinet affirmatively approved of the sit-down strike. Indeed, it has been reported around Washington for weeks that Attorney General Homer S. Cummings had looked into the matter and had concluded that the sit-down strike was illegal.

But the record is clear that the President appeared sympathetic to the strikers, not alone as the friend of their leader, Mr. Lewis, but in placing moral pressure on Mr. Sloan to enter into negotiations while his workers unlawfully held his plants. In effect, the President had indicated to labor that he considered proper their demand that employers be required to negotiate disputes while their workers held their plants.

With the establishment of that principle labor ever since has gone forward on the theory that the way to force negotiations and concessions is to hold employers' plants until the latter capitulate. How long orderly government can wink its eye at that sort of thing is what has precipitated debate on Capitol Hill this week. The problem, however, is not of the Supreme Court's making.

Norris, Father of TVA, Calls Waltman Criticism Inaccurate

Denouncing as "false and malicious propaganda" the newspaper stories and utilities company releases holding that Tennessee Valley Authority activities had not aided in flood prevention in the Tennessee River valley, Senator George W. Norris (Independent Republican), Nebraska, yesterday stated on the Senate floor that two sentences from an article by Franklyn Waltman, Washington Post columnist, of March 6, were either "entirely untrue or partially so."

The venerable "Father TVA," incensed at criticism by Waltman and others of the President's speech of March 4, on the grounds that it exaggerated Norris Dam's aid during the recent floods, said these reports had been carried throughout the United States. He pointed out that, following Mr. Waltman's article, the New York Herald-Tribune, the Wall Street Journal, the Chicago Journal of Commerce, the Cincinnati Times-Star and "many other newspapers" had picked up the story either editorially or as news.

Called "Propaganda."

He stated that shortly after that Stephen M. Walter, a public utilities lobbyist, had circulated "another piece of propaganda," "like the article in The Washington Post," with a "map controverted" from a Weather Bureau map, and showing normal rainfall to have fallen in the area under discussion in eastern Tennessee prior to the floods.

Senator Norris asserted Weather Bureau reports actually show rainfall to have been 300 per cent above normal in that period in that area. He further asserted that Norris Dam was of great flood value in that it was built for flood prevention, with a reservoir vast enough to hold far more water than any flood could produce. He said:

"If I had built the Norris Dam, I would have built it for power, as the private interests would do it."

Point I. Stressed.

His point was that a power dam is necessarily kept filled in order to have a maximum flow of water at all times to produce a certain amount of power, and must be first emptied if it is to act as a flood prevention dam. Norris Dam, he held, has never been filled to maximum storage.

The sentences quoted from Mr. Waltman's article, which Senator Norris held to be either entirely or partly untrue, were as follows:

"The reason why the Tennessee Valley escaped the flood havoc suffered by the Ohio Valley was not due to the TVA but because there was only normal rainfall—4.59 inches—during January at the headwaters of the Tennessee and the Clinch River which empties into it, whereas from 8 to 20 inches of rain fell into the Ohio Valley.

"Neither the Wilson nor the Norris dams in the TVA program are flood-control dams. They are hydro-electric dams—that is to say, their purpose presupposes a full dam and an even flow of water."

Farmers Plan Larger Acreage Of Spring Crops

Bumper Year Is Expected; Conservation Act May Be Tightened.

By Russell Smith.

"Material increases" in planting of spring crops are planned by farmers this year, headed by an 87 per cent gain in spring wheat acreage as compared with harvested acres in 1936, the Department of Agriculture announced yesterday.

Following the announcement, it was learned, farm organization leaders here expect Congress to strengthen the soil conservation act during this session, regardless of action on Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" proposal.

The increased acreage will result in a reinforced demand for stricter Federal control over the National agriculture, Chester H. Gray, local representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said last night. He said, however, this demand will have in view a long-range program rather than immediate attempts to regulate production.

Price Decline Unlikely.

Except for cotton, carryovers of all major crops are so small as to render unlikely any marked decline in prices as a result of the heavier plantings indicated today by the department, Gray also said.

He attributed the heavier planting to comparatively high prices of many farm products and to a need for added income, which, despite price levels, has been low in recent years, he said.

AAA officials emphasized that under the soil conservation act no controls have been exercised over the farmer's choice of crops after he has diverted land from soil-depleting crops, and hence for three years there has been no curb upon wheat production.

In the case of corn, some control is exercised in limitation of the acreage which may be put into that crop, and in cotton and tobacco similar controls are in operation.

Would Regulate Crops.

Legislation to strengthen the soil conservation act, which Gray yesterday termed more "nearly free of constitutional doubt than any other farm acts of recent years," would be likely, therefore, to be directed toward stricter limitations upon the farmer's use of land diverted from soil-depleting crops.

Far from fearing a bumper crop year in 1937, however, AAA officials frankly assert they hope never to be confronted with a situation such as resulted from last year's drought. They expressed themselves as far more concerned over the yet-depleted moisture of large areas in the West than over prospective surpluses.

In its statement yesterday, the department said:

"Farmers are planning material increases in the acreage of spring crops compared with the acreage harvested in the drought year of 1936, according to reports which the crop reporting board of the United States Department of Agriculture has received from all parts of the country."

Many Gains Shown.

"Nearly all crops show increases, and some of the increases appear large; but with supplies on farms reduced by drought and with the demand for most farm products showing definite signs of recovery, the intended acreage does not appear to be abnormal.

"A comparison with average acreages during the 1928-1932 period indicates that this year's acreages of most spring-sown crops will be below average, the chief exceptions being nominal increases in rice, sweet potatoes, spring wheat and hay, some substitution of grain sorghum for corn, and large acreages of soybeans, cowpeas and peanuts. In comparison with the average, the most important decreases shown are: corn, 8,600,000 acres; oats, 4,400,000 acres, and barley, 1,700,000 acres.

"No forecast of the total acreage of crops can be made as yet, for, in accordance with the law, no inquiry was made of farmers' intentions with regard to cotton, but so far as can be determined from the farmers' present plans with regard to other spring-planted crops, and their expectations regarding winter wheat and rye, this year's total crop acreage (excluding cotton) may be expected to be somewhere near the 1928-1932 average."

The indicated corn acreage is 94,840,000, compared with 92,829,-000 harvested last year when 1,524,-203,000 bushels were produced, and 103,341,000 acres, the 1928-1932 average, when average production was 2,553,424,000 bushels.

Spring wheat is estimated at 20,918,000 acres, compared with 11,212,000 harvested last year when production was 107,448,000 bushels and 20,424,000 acres, the 1928-1932 average, when average production was 241,312,000.

3 Georgia Counties Back CourtChange

Donaldsonville, Ga., March 19 (AP). Seminole, the first county to hold a Presidential preference primary for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936, gave his Federal court reorganization plan a favorable vote today.

Complete official returns from the rural southwest Georgia county, the third in as many days to ballot on the question, gave 632 votes for President Roosevelt's proposal to 17 against it.

Joe Johnson, jr., of the Democratic executive committee here said the vote for the court plan was stronger proportionately than that cast in favor of Mr. Roosevelt when Seminole voters registered a preference for him for President over former Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

The movement for a county vote on the court plan originated in Seminole some weeks ago but previously planned special elections for county officers enabled nearby Mitchell and Randolph counties to vote first.

Randolph Wednesday voted 1,092 to 174 in favor of the President's court plan. Yesterday Mitchell voted 1,714 for as compared with 355 against on the face of unofficial incomplete returns.

Hoover Pleads For Increased Fund for F.B.I.

Manpower Lack Cripples Crime War, Congress Is Warned.

By the United Press.

Inadequate manpower handicaps the G-Men's war on kidnaping and other major crimes, Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation warned Congress today.

Testimony at hearings before the House Appropriations sub-committee on the Justice Department appropriation bill for the 1938 fiscal year disclosed Hoover's warning and appeal for increased funds.

He told the committee FBI field agents worked more than 200,000 hours overtime during the period from July to December last year and that such "excessive demands eventually will interfere with the efficiency of a man's work."

Hoover asked the committee to increase budget estimates by $337,160 to permit the addition of 81 special agents to the G-man force.

Attorney General Cummings supported Hoover's requests and asked a specific $25,000 appropriation for paying rewards for help in capturing kidnapers or other desperadoes.

President's Son Calls Judiciary 'Aloof, Apart'

Cites Supreme Court Lack of Co-operation in Defending Change.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Ga., March 19.—James Roosevelt, administrative assistant to the President, his father, charged tonight the Federal judiciary "has been able to take advantages of circumstances to set itself aloof and apart from the will of the people."

Defending the Chief Executive's Federal court reorganization plan at a belated Democratic "victory dinner," young Roosevelt added that the judicial branch of the Government "has failed in its obligation to remain within its own sphere of action. It thus has failed to co-operate in a democratic form of government."

The speaker drew an analogy between the Nation and a watch.

"The watch is running today, but it may stop," he said. "Why? Because there are still abroad in foreign lands, uncontrollable, unpredictable forces; because we will have several million unemployed in our own country; because there are signs of the reappearance of false speculative values; because forces are at work which tend to throw the farmer and the working man again out of balance."

President Roosevelt, on vacation at nearby Warm Springs, did not say whether he would "tune in" on his son's speech. The President left Warm Springs this afternoon for LaGrange, Ga., to have dinner at the 10,000-acre estate of Cason J. Callaway, textile manufacturer.

Bryan Anniversary Observed on Radio

The seventy-seventh anniversary of the birth of William Jennings Bryan was observed yesterday afternoon with Representative Henry C. Luckey (Democrat), Nebraska, and Wayne Williams, Justice Department employe and author of a biography of Bryan, delivering radio addresses on "The Great Commoner."

Speaking under the auspices of the Bryan Memorial Association, Luckey described the statesman's "meteoric rise" and championship of the rights of labor. Luckey, who comes from the Nebraska district in which Bryan lived, emphasized Bryan's opposition to the armament race preceding the World War and his conception of neutrality.

In connection with the broadcast, the Bryan Association announced tentative plans for unveiling a statue of the statesman in the Capitol late in April. The program will include a formal dedication, addresses and a pilgrimage to Bryan's grave in Arlington Cemetery.

The National Press Club will hold a St. Patrick's Day party tonight, with James Garrioch, of the National Symphony Orchestra, headlining the entertainment with his bagpipe.

Origin of the bagpipe will form a background for the theme of the evening. Maj. J. S. S. Richardson, a native of Scotland and a graduate of the University of Edinburgh, claims it did not originate in the land of the heather, but in Ireland.

Opposing him will be Henry Flynn and Joyce O'Hara, who assert the bagpipe is Scotch and not Irish. Chairman of the dance committee for the evening is Ned Brooks.

Path Cleared For Marriage Of Ex-Monarch

Clerk, Bowing to Edward's Wishes, Recalls Objection to Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 19.—An elderly little lawyer's clerk, won over from patriotism to the cause of love by the unhappy heart of his king, helped today to clear one of the last obstacles to the marriage of Edward of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

The white-mustached clerk, Francis Stephenson, at first resented his monarch's preference for a woman over an empire, and determined to thwart him from carrying out his historic decision. He decided to stop the divorce which would make it possible.

But today, touched by the plaintive note of former King Edward's farewell broadcast when he said, "I cannot continue to discharge my duties without the woman I love," the little, bespectacled clerk stepped aside from the affairs of state and Cupid.

He withdrew his objections and Sir Boyd Merriman, president of the British Divorce Court, formally dismissed the charge of "collusion," a barrier which could have prevented Edward and Mrs. Simpson from marrying.

Stephenson, fingering his gold-rimmed glasses, told how he was dissuaded from his plan by Edward's own appeal.

Listening to the broadcast message, he said, "I thought I still should have some respect for him, I felt sorry for him, and I decided I couldn't do anything to harm him."

The court's decision, striking the intervention from the record, completely absolved Mrs. Simpson from any legal irregularity. The King's proctor told the court that, treating the case "as any other," he found no evidence to justify intervention. Her divorce, in the normal course of events, now may become final, April 27.

Notwithstanding Stephenson's voluntary withdrawal of the collusion charge, Attorney General Donald Sommervell said the proctor carefully had sifted the evidence for "there were circumstances connected with this case which made it in my opinion a proper case for investigation."

Sir Donald said he had three questions in mind: Whether the case was arranged or a collusive one, whether Mrs. Simpson was an accessory or connived at adultery and whether there was any question of her right to "relief."

Norman Birkett, who represented Mrs. Simpson when she was awarded a probationary divorce decree from Ernest Aldrich Simpson last October 27, was questioned on why the application was filed in the little town.

Birkett answered that the decision was on his advice because Mrs. Simpson was "then suffering and was now suffering great nerve strain." In the circumstances, he explained, he thought it best that the case be dealt with as expeditiously as possible.

Britain's Censors Are Cold to U. S. 'Strip-Tease' Act

London, March 19 (U.P.).—British theater-goers predicted tonight that Miss Diana Raye, American dancer, will land in a patrol wagon with a policeman's cape covering her nudity if she goes through with her plan to introduce the "strip tease" to Great Britain.

The Lord Chamberlain's office, which censors theatrical productions, was uncertain how it could prevent Miss Raye from shocking the British sense of propriety in her scheduled debut at the Palladium March 29.

An attache of the office explained that it was the custom to examine only the scripts of forthcoming acts. Unless some definite complaint is made, he added, the Lord Chamberlain's office appears powerless.

Odorless Gas Blamed By Scientist for Blast

C. H. Wetmore, author of scientific and other articles, and former resident of Pensylvania, yesterday suggested that natural gas, which has no odor, might possibly have been the cause of the New London, Tex., schoolhouse blast.

In Pennsylvania, he said, a chemical which gives every leak a pungent odor, is mixed into the gas at its source. The New London, Tex., oil field, on which the school was built, he said, is new. He conjectured that there had not been sufficient time to take precautions.

ed about in the rain, picking up school books blown hundreds of feet away and carting them away in tin buckets. Coffee in huge buckets was passed around among the workers.

Arrival of Albert Evans, disaster relief director for the American Red Cross, started quick organization of relief agencies.

It was the same story in each hospital. "Yes, we have some survivors here," said one physician, "but they are decreasing. We lost two in the last hour and probably four more will die shortly."

In a morgue in Henderson 40 embalmers labored over 140 bodies.

"I heard many stories of heroism," said Richard McAllister, a news photographer, "but one that will stick with me was about a teacher who shoved a youngster, who was reciting, under her desk when she felt the first tremor of the blast and then dropped beside the desk herself.

Homes Provide Shelter.

"Both were later taken from the wreckage, the teacher badly hurt, the youngster without a scratch. Some 30 others who had been listening to the recitation will never hear another."

Listening to broadcasts describing the explosion horror, Wesley H. Pitkin, 38, an oil field worker at Bellville, Tex., became mentally unbalanced and was shot to death by Deputy Sheriff E. F. Reinecker.

"Reinecker had to shoot my brother or my brother would have killed both Reinecker and me," said Cleaburn Pitkin, in a statement to Austin County officials.

Oil field homes were thrown open indiscriminately to any one who asked for beds.

Skating rinks, stores and other emergency morgues were being emptied gradually as the day wore on and nurses, doctors, legion officials and others who had been standing a vigil for 20 hours, rested on stained cots and sheets thrown on floors.

President Roosevelt put the full force of the Federal Government behind relief work. A trade school in Japan cabled condolences. Adolf Hitler expressed sympathy.

The task of identification was one of the most difficult presented by the disaster and was the cause of many scenes of pathos.

Long lines of the bereaved moved wearily through improvised morgues, peering to pick their missing children from the rows of sheeted bodies.

There were few tears. The tragedy was still too fresh, the magnitude of the loss, both personal and community, too vast for immediate comprehension.

the hardest of folk. They're big and tough, and they live the same way. Oil towns are notorious for their hell-for-leather, rip-roaring times; for their anything-goes-at-anytime spirit.

And Friday night is always a gala night in an oil town, because Friday is pay day and tomorrow is Saturday, when all the joints are wide open.

You should see this oil town tonight. The only places where there are crowds are the telegraph companies ("Try and be here by 12 stop Bobby will be buried in the early afternoon"); the funeral homes ("No, it ain't her. Oh, God!"), and the hospitals ("Be as quiet as you can, p'lease.").

13 Other Towns Affected.

The crowds that stand dumbly around these places in New London have duplicates in 13 other east Texas towns, because this village had no facilities for the handling of more than 400 bodies, the dispatch of thousands of telegrams and calls. In Tyler, in Kilgore, in Henderson, the back yards of funeral homes were packed with coffins; hospitals and churches were laden with the injured.

Here and in Overton the overflow made it necessary to utilize space in garages, laundries and abandoned buildings.

Main street here tonight was the street of sorrow.

Oil folk are accustomed to tragedies—minor tragedies. Hardly a month passes that a "roughneck" doesn't get burned to death, or a "rigger" lose his footing on the top of a hundred-foot derrick. They accept those things as part of the work. But this blast which tore asunder buildings nearly half again as large as a football field, wiping out a third of thee nrollment, rendered them helpless.

Tonight Main street was choked with men and women just shuffling along. Now and then a child passed, his face swathed in gauze patches. I talked with many of the children, and, still dazed, they answered questions of the explosion as dispassionately as though they were speaking of a picnic.

There was Johnny Farrand, 16, of the seventh grade.

"What happened, Johnny?"

"Well, I was sitting in the study hall and all of a sudden there was a sorta wham. I saw the walls come in, and the dust fly. I knocked out a window and jumped out."

The study hall was on the second floor.

There was pretty Evelyn Hudkins, 16. She crawled through a twisted tangle of girders and dragged behind her the torn body of Johnny Roberts.

"He was my sweetheart," she said. "I've gone around with him ever since I can remember, and I couldn't leave him there, though I knew he was dead."

There was Mrs. Homer Gary, a teacher.

"I saw the wall falling and jumped under my desk. That was at a little after 3 in the afternoon. At 2 the next morning they cut me out with acetylene torches."

I can best describe the conditions at the site of the once beautiful, $300,000 New London schoolhouse by quoting a "roustabout" I talked to as he swung his pick into the debris.

"I'm an Englishman," he said, and I went through four years of the war. This is the first time I ever saw anything that was worse."

Tractors Aid Work.

I watched four tractors fasten their cables to the entire side of a wall that had fallen in, sealing a classroom. The 10-ton slab was yanked aside, and three little bodies removed.

I watched mothers and fathers superintend the crowbarring of their children's lockers. It was almost more than one could bear as they were handed sweaters, baseball gloves, tennis racquets and books.

I talked to parents who, earlier in the day, had whipped their children for playing hookey. They cried with joy as they told me of the punishment they had meted out.

But there were more than 400 that I didn't talk to.

Germany Is Among First to Express Sympathy; Hitler Sends Note.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign powers expressed sympathy to the United States last night over the tragic school explosion at New London, Tex.

The German government, which only a few days ago protested that Adolf Hitler had been insulted in this country, was the first to send an expression.

Ambassador Hans Luther transmitted the following message to Secretary Hull:

"I have learned with the deepest grief of the terrible disaster in New London, Tex., which has resulted in the loss of lives of so many promising American children. On behalf of the German government as well as my own behalf I have the honor to express to the Government of the United States my profoundest sympathy."

Similar expressions were received later from representatives of France, Poland, Norway and Canada.

Expressions of sorrow and concern were heard also at the temporary White House at Warm Springs, Ga., in Congress and many official departments.

President Roosevelt ordered the Red Cross and Government agencies to "render every assistance in their power to the community to which this shocking tragedy has come."

"It's horrible—terrible," said Vice President Garner.

Senators Connally and Sheppard, of Texas, spoke on the Senate floor.

"The heart and sympathies of the people of Texas are profoundly moved by this stupendous calamity," said Connally.

"I feel that I can speak for the entire Senate," Sheppard added, "in extending sympathy to stricken families, stricken cities and stricken towns."

At Denison, Tex., Mrs. Roosevelt said "something must be done to guard against such calamities." The President's wife is on a speaking tour.

Laughlin, Lawyer, Given Prison Term; Probation Denied

Spurning a plea for probation, Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Criminal Court yesterday sentenced James J. Laughlin, attorney, to an indeterminate prison term of from a year to 13 months on charges of forgery, uttering and larceny after trust.

George D. Horning, jr., attorney for Laughlin, had quoted several passages from Shakespeare in support of his plea for leniency toward his client. He also pointed out that Laughlin would be disbarred as an attorney if the Court of Appeals upheld the conviction.

Laughlin, the father of five children, accepted his sentence.

The charge against him was that he took $1,492 from three clients who were being held in the District Jail and failed to account to them for the money. They were Walter C. Johnson, Edward R. Dietrich and Erma Miller, who were being held on charges of false pretenses.

Hiking Club to Meet.

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club will meet at Cabin John at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow and hike to Booze Run, to Bull Run and then across-country to the junction of the old and new Georgetown-Rockville roads.

$10,000 Verdict Given Dr. Kenney

Dr. Nellie Lowe Kenney, 707 Massachusetts avenue northeast, was awarded a verdict for $10,000 against the S. S. Kresge Co. yesterday in District Court because of injuries she sustained when she tripped and fell down a flight of stairs in the store at Eleventh and G streets northwest. She complained a toy drum had been allowed to remain on the stairway and she blamed that for her fall.

Writs Issued For Arrest of Auto Strikers

Sheriff Confers With Governor on Chrysler Sit-Down.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 19.—Gov. Frank Murphy intervened in the Chrysler automobile strike tonight as the Wayne County sheriff held writs for arrest of 6,000 sit-down strikers who control the corporation's eight plants here.

Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox conferred with the Governor, a few hours after Circuit Judge Allan Campbell ordered the arrests, but both said no request for National Guard assistance in serving the writs had been made. The sheriff's force of deputies numbers but 120; his office indicated no immediate action was possible.

(Menwhile Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins conferred with Walter Chrysler in New York concerning plans to settle the strikes, the United Press reported—Editors note.)

The sit-downers who have spent 12 days in the Chrysler plants showed little concern over the possibility of arrest. "The sheriff has the writs, but he won't serve them," one union picket said.

Murphy, outwardly optimistic over chances for peaceful settlement of the dispute in which the United Automobile Workers of America is seeking to enforce demands for exclusive bargaining rights, engaged in a series of conferences with opposing leaders.

Peace Effort Continues.

Even while Sheriff Wilcox talked with the Governor, Richard T. Frankensteen, U. A. W. A. organizational director, and George S. Wilson, president of the union local in the huge Dodge plant which employs 25,000 men, were in Murphy's hotel suite. The Governor arranged later conferences with Chrysler executives.

"I am exhausting every effort for peace," was the only announcement made by Murphy, whose mediation efforts aided in concluding the Nation-wide General Motors strikes a month ago.

Neither the union's sudden strike March 8 which threw 80,000 workers out of employment, nor the corporation's court moves to evict the sit-down strikers, have interrupted conferences in which U. A. W. A. and Chrysler representatives have discussed the union demands. These continued today, without indication that either side had retreated from its original position.

The Chrysler plants, scene Wednesday of a "show of strength" demonstration participated in by 20,000 union sympathizers, were quiet today as the sheriff made no move toward eviction of the strikers.

Report Fire in Plant.

The writs called for arrest of defendants "who have occupied the plaintiff's plants at any time since 9 a. m. Wednesday" and directed the sheriff to bring them "before this court for such misconduct."

Thomas F. Chawke, Chrysler attorney, said that since the original complaint charged conspiracy, Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, and other high union officials, and even those who prepared or delivered food to the sit-down strikers, could be arrested.

He added, however, "our primary object now is to get the men out of the plants," which the injunction petition valued at more than $50,000,000.

An early morning fire at the Dodge plant remained a mystery, union sources denying such an occurrence, and the fire departments of suburban Highland Park and Hamtramck reporting four companies were sent to the scene and extinguished the blaze. John Griffin, Hamtramck fire chief, was taken to a hospital where attaches declined any information.

140,000 Mill Workers Get Pay Increase

Union leaders pushed for further gains yesterday in the Nation's swiftly changing labor picture.

In New York, Sidney Hillman launched the heralded textile workers' organization drive amid a chorus of pay raise announcements affecting nearly 140,000 workers in New England and the South.

A printers' strike which deprived Indianapolis of its three daily newspapers, while one of the greatest stories of the century unfolded in Texas was settled. Not far away from Indiana's capital another strike halted operations on two electric interurban lines and left 11 communities in darkness.

Philip Murray announced at Pittsburgh the Steel Workers' Union would drive toward contracts with the huge Bethlehem Steel Corporation, following up its success with United States Steel Corporation.

Hillman, recently chosen by John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization to lead the textile drive, said the "wage increases in New England and South Carolina will not affect our campaign. We are going right ahead."

Pay raises were announced for 80,000 textile workers in New England and more than 57,000 in the South, with other employers expected to follow. The industry employs about 1,250,000 persons.

An intra-union dispute had developed with the typographical workers' strike at Indianapolis. Charles P. Howard, international president of the typographers, called the strike a "violation of an arbitration agreement" and threatened to send other union men to replace them.

Striking truck drivers signed a 60-day truce at Detroit and released 200,000,000 pounds of freight, tied up since Monday.

New York City police arrested 39 F. W. Woolworth "5-and-10" store workers who attempted to re-establish a sit-down strike broken up hte night before.

Today's Traffic Lesson

Drawn by Policeman Forrest L. Binswanger, Traffic Division.

The diagram shows dangerous practices by pedestrians and motorists on streets used by street cars. The following rules are quoted from Traffic Regulations:

"The driver of a vehicle upon approaching any street car going in the same direction which has stopped or is about to stop for the purpose of receiving or discharging passengers, and the driver of a vehicle when approaching any street car going in either direction on tracks which are located on the side of a highway and not in the center thereof, shall bring such vehicle to a full stop not closer than 10 feet from the nearest exit of such street car, and shall keep such vehicle standing until passengers have boarded such car or reached the nearest adjacent sidewalk space, except that when a safety zone has been established the driver may pass with due caution for the safety of pedestrians.

"No vehicle being driven on a one-way street shall pass on either side of a street car when such street car is stopped for the loading or unloading of passengers.

"No person shall drive a vehicle in or through any part of any 'safety zone,' whether such zone be occupied or not."

Congress Row Marks Hearing On Strike Crisis

Joseph T. Robinson, of the Senate. Robinson recently stated in effect that until the Supreme Court had passed on the Wagner labor relations act, the Government was unable to cope with labor difficulties. Cox, quoting Robinson's statement verbatim, and calling sit-down strikes "anatchy in its worst form," said:

"This is another back-handed lick at the Supreme Court and is not persuasive. To create a condition of disrespect for the court and open defiance of their decrees, and then charge them with responsibility for this state of lawlessness, is conduct unbecoming honest men."

Cox sought "condemnation from persons high in authority" instead of a "temporizing attitude."

Borah directed his attack at his favorite enemy—monopolies—charging that "vast corporate interests living in violation of the law are crushing out existence of hundreds of thousands of "small business men in the United States * * * I am one of those who take the position that until you destroy—not control or regulate but destroy—the monopolistic control of the economic affairs of the Nation you are not going to have law and order and lawful action."

Borah Sounds Warning.

He held that these monopolies exist due to legislative tolerance and through grants from National and State governments. He warned:

"We will either exert the power and restore economic justice in the United States, or, take my word for it, we will have something more than sit-down strikes in this country.

"These economic conditions furnished the battalions for Mussolini in his march on Rome. It was hunger and nakedness and economic chaos which broke the hold of the Czars and invited Lenin to take charge.

"It was the inordinate greed of monopoly and the demands of German landlords that broke the nerve of the manhood and womanhood of Germany and opened wide the road for Hitler.

"No form of government, nor constitution, can stand indefinitely against economic injustice. Thirty-six thousand men in this country at the top rung have an income equal to that of 11,500,000 men at the bottom rung."

Senator Hugo Black, Democrat, Alabama, plunged into long argument in contention that Supreme Court decisions had taken from the States their powers to preserve labor peace. Borah then countered with a defense of his amendment to the Fourteenth Amendment, whose due process clause, he said, had created a "no-man's land."

Then Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, alleged that the "Supreme Court is on a sit-down strike." Senator Prentiss M. Brown (Democrat), Michigan, weighing his words as carefully as had Senator Vandenberg, urged patience and forbearance in the crisis and in criticizing those who "are in favor of shooting down the workmen," said: "Since when is a violation of trespassing subject to the death penalty?"

Man Descended From Animals, Jesuit Says

Says, as Scientist, He Must Put Aside His Personal Feelings.

man had a ridge no longer existing in humans. From this ridge to brow was Sinanthropus' longest head diameter.

Sinanthropus was undoubtedly human, said Father de Chardin. He showed a picture of a Sinanthropus skull with an unusual triangular bone at the back which he said has been found also in the heads of the ancient Incas of South America.

"Below this Sinanthropus stage of man," he said, "we may expect to find two more 'platforms.' One should be an intermediate being which probably can be recognized by the leaning in the man direction.

"Below that we should be able to find a being so primitive that we could not have any reason for separating him from the ape group."

Father de Chardin was asked by interviewers after his lecture:

"How do you, a Jesuit, reconcile evolution with the religious belief of the special creation of man?" and "Do you believe in evolution?"

"As a scientist," he replied, "I must put aside personal feelings and accept the facts. From the facts I must believe in evolution."

He then went on to make the statement already quoted about Christianity and continued:

"In creation there were two tremendously important events. First was the appearance of organized life. The other was the appearance of thought. These did not necessarily occur simultaneously.

"Man considered as a whole may be traced back to the origin of life, somewhat as a human being can be traced back to an origin in a single living cell. In this story of life as we find the evidence in rocks and fossils today there came a 'critical' point. It was like the 'critical' point or temperature at which water turns to steam. The steam is no longer water. It was at such a 'critical' point in the world that thought was born, a 'critical' point of tremendous significance."

Count Grandi to Attend Coronation for Italy

London, March 19 (AP).—Count Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador to Great Britain, will represent Italy at King George's coronation May 12, informed sources said tonight.

Premier Benito Mussolini was quoted by the Daily Mail as saying a coronation invitation to Emperor Haile Selassie would lead to "the absence of an Italian delegation" at the ceremonies. This was interpreted to mean that Italy would not send a representative of the Italian court, but that the ban would not apply to government representation.

Death Ran Amuck.

Not even those on the stricken scene can realize the full horror of the disaster that has befallen the little Texas community of New London. In an instant the teeming life of its splendid new school center became a ghastly exhibition of carnage. As the work of disentangling crushed bodies from shattered concrete and steel is completed, the tragedy reveals itself as the worst of its kind in American history.

Millions of people will feel the shock of this catastrophe. Washingtonians will recall the sickening experience of the Knickerbocker Theater's collapse in 1922. Memories will reach back to the sinking of the Titanic and to the Iroquois Theater catastrophe in Chicago. Sympathy from every part of the Nation will pour in upon the bereaved families of New London. But the region around this stricken hamlet will still have to face the future with its younger generation virtually wiped out.

Fact is often more incredible than fiction. And tragedies such as this seem almost too terrible to be true. Death ran amuck. The only reasonable explanation of the blast seems to be that gas accumulated in the basement and in the hollow tile of the building from nearby oil wells. When the official investigations get under way there will doubtless be inquiry as to why an expensive new school should ever have been located in the midst of seven producing oil wells. Even if negligence in the location of the building and its supervision should be proved, however, the incredible sacrifice inflicted upon that community will not be fully understandable.

The victims of this explosion are fewer in number than the average weekly list of automobile casualties in the United States. Probably a much larger number of children have been blown to bits by Fascist bombs and shells during the long siege of Madrid. Such comparisons, however, do not minimize the Texas disaster. They only sharpen the significance of an indiscriminate slaughter that has become commonplace.

The tragedy of our civilization is that science, with all of its inventions, has done as much to promote death as to improve the security of human life.

A District Merit System.

Establishment of a civil service system for the District is one reform on which there can be no fundamental controversy. In this period of expanding municipal responsibilities there is no excuse whatever for continued political domination of local public services. That is especially true in the District, where citizens are unable to correct abuses at the ballot box.

It is only on the details of organizing a civil service system here that divergent opinions have been expressed by Commissioners Hazen and Allen. On the central objective they are in complete accord. It should not be difficult, therefore, to work out a plan that will obtain the full support of the Commissioners as well as the public.

Commissioner Hazen suggests that all the District's non-policy-making appointees should be drawn from the registers of the Civil Service Commission. Presumably he wishes to avoid the expense that would be involved in setting up a local civil service commission when the District is confronted by a huge prospective deficit. On the other hand, Commissioner Allen points out that extension of the present arrangement would result in the distribution of local jobs among residents of the entire country, instead of restricting them to local citizens.

Both are right from their respective points of view. The expense of setting up separate civil service machinery for Washington should be avoided and positions in the local government should obviously be awarded to residents, except where the special requirements of an administrative post make it advisable to survey a broad field for first-class technicians. Fortunately, both objectives can be attained in a relatively simple way.

At present, local appointees must be chosen from the national registers of the Civil Service Commission because the District has no merit system of its own. That could be remedied by passage of a civil service act for Washington, to be administered by the C. S. C. For standard positions the commission could then prepare subregisters containing only the names of Washingtonians eligible for local appointments. In the case of special positions, local examinations could be held with very little expense.

Of course, this plan would involve an act of Congress. But it would be far simpler and more economical than the establishment of a separate civil service commission for the District. And it would fully serve the acute need for machinery under which the most competent local applicants can be drawn into the municipal government service.

A Good Way To Settle Disputes.

The revamped retirement plan agreed upon by representatives of the railroads and rail unions is a rather unique proposal. In fact, the terms of the agreement really amount to an unofficial revision of the present railroad retirement system. To make it effective, Congress will be asked to amend the existing retirement act.

The proposed changes relate to such matters as the scale of benefit payments, the conditions of retirement, and the amount of the pay-roll taxes. The compromise plan would assist roads with private pension systems to fit them into a comprehensive general pension system without frustrating the just expectations of their employes. The increases in maximum pensions also make the plan more acceptable to the unions. The financial burden upon both employers and employes would be lightened by gradually "stepping up" the tax levies instead of imposing the maximum rate at once. However, Treasury experts fear that the reduced payments may not be sufficient to carry the load.

If this voluntary agreement is validated by Congressional approval of laws needed to make it effective, the roads promise to drop their fight to have the existing retirement act declared unconstitutional. That is a very important concession in view of the uncertain status of compulsory retirement legislation of this type. The first railway retirement act was declared unconstitutional in 1935 in a sweeping 5-to-4 decision that brought sharp criticism from Chief Justice Hughes. In delivering the dissenting opinion he said, "The gravest aspect of the decision is that it does not rest simply upon a condemnation of particular features of the railroad retirement act, but denies to Congress the power to pass any compulsory pension act for railroad employes."

In the light of this interpretation of the majority ruling, it seems highly doubtful whether the revised pension act with its supporting tax law could survive the scrutiny of the Supreme Court any more successfully than the original act. However, the voluntary agreement proposed by the roads and the unions makes a legal contest most unlikely.

The problem confronting the roads and their employes cannot be solved to the satisfaction of either side by court decisions. If the roads were to slip in an effort to have the law overthrown, they would still be confronted by the question of alternatives. Their employes would then be brought under the general provisions of the social security act—an arrangement that would suit neither management nor labor. If they should lose, they would forfeit the opportunity of securing modifications of the pension plan along the lines of the present agreement.

The success which has crowned the efforts of the negotiators in this case provides another outstanding demonstration, therefore, of the value of collective bargaining when both management and labor is effectively organized and can put faith in each other's promises.

The Will And The Way.

Executives of the Remington Rand Co. have voluntarily conferred with A. F. of L. officials representing their employes and, under the auspices of the Secretary of Labor, an agreement satisfactory to both sides has seemingly been reached. Although the precise terms of the proposed settlement are not yet known, it is assumed that they are in general conformity with the order issued by the National Labor Relations Board, at least so far as reinstatement of striking employes is concerned.

Exposure and denunciation of the ruthless strikebreaking tactics of the company by the NLRB have no doubt hastened this constructive agreement. But more important than the reasons for the sudden change of attitude is the fact that a basis for settlement was found to exist as soon as the company's "grim determination" not to bargain with the union was overcome.

There are, of course, cases in which workers make demands that cannot be met, either because they are beyond the financial capacity of the employer or because they would interfere with efficient management of the business. But the best protection against excessive and unreasonable proposals of this sort lies in collective bargaining carried on by responsible representatives of both sides. Under such conditions, if there is a will to reach a peaceful settlement, a formula for compromising differences can always be devised. That is shown to be true even in this particularly difficult case, in which prolonged strikes precipitated by the company's refusal to bargain collectively were fought with "cold, deliberate ruthlessness."

Strikebreaking of this type is extremely expensive to the company as well as to workers and to the communities in which the latter live. As the NLRB says, "human rights aside, even a calculating dollars-and-cents approach to the situation would require that an employer confer with the representatives of his employes." Moreover, if a strike is broken by terroristic tactics, the causes of industrial unrest are not eliminated. They are only suppressed, to break out with renewed bitterness at the first opportunity.

This is the point which Senator Borah made in saying yesterday that while the sit-down strike is obviously illegal, it has been seized upon by labor as an effective weapon "in an economic system dominated by lawlessness." The present situation in Detroit is, as Gov. Murphy says, "a modified form of banditry." It cannot be tolerated. But it is at least partially explained by the bitter and short-sighted anti-union attitude which has dominated that city for many years.

No Guarantee Against War.

By an even more overwhelming vote, proportionally, than that with which the Senate passed the Pittman bill, the House has now put the seal of its approval on the rival McReynolds bill. The final tally was 374 to 12.

It is now up to the conference committee to work out a compromise satisfactory to both houses. This is likely to prove no easy task. Although the two bills resemble each other in many ways, they differ diametrically regarding certain essentials.

The Pittman bill unwisely freezes existing definitions as to what constitute arms, ammunition and implements of war. This pitfall the House measure avoids by giving the President the authority to modify the present list to bring it in line with future technical developments. More important are the differences in the two measures concerning the "cash and carry" policy with regard to war-time trade in essential raw materials.

In the Senate bill this policy would go into force the moment any war occurred, regardless of the size and nature of that war and regardless of whether any American interest would be served by prohibiting American ships from carrying essential raw materials to the belligerents. The McReynolds bill places in the hands of the President discretionary power to apply or refrain from applying the "cash and carry" clause. And it is also elastic enough to make Canada an exception to the special provisions of the neutrality act.

The most important change made in the McReynolds bill in the closing hours of the debate was that imposing a time limit. The Pittman bill has no such time limit. Presumably it is written to apply for all time. Yet no men can foresee what changing circumstances may soon arise to compel sharp modification of our present neutrality policy. In requiring Congress to review the problem two years hence the McReynolds bill gives further evidence of its greater realism.

But no neutrality legislation, as Secretary Hull has pointed out, gives the United States any certain guarantee against involvement in war. The McReynolds bill, by providing a wider area of discretion for the President, is in this respect better than its rival. In the long run, however, the only guarantee for American neutrality lies in the continuance of world peace. Despite the defeatism of the moment, now happily lessening, the United States, truly to safeguard itself against war, must sooner or later work co-operatively to that end with all the nations seeking to prevent another such catastrophe as that of 1914.

Massachusetts Reconsiders.

The conference committee now considering the fate of our notorious "Red rider" can take to heart the action of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, which has just voted to repeal the teachers' oath law of that State.

This egregious manifestation of lack of faith in the patriotism of the teaching profession, whose devotion to American ideals has been abundantly proven over and over again, aroused a great deal of opposition in the Bay State. For a time the patriotteers had their way. But now the tide is turning. When the upper house of the Massachusetts Legislature follows the lead of the lower, the oath law there will be consigned to the limbo where it belongs.

That same limbo contains plenty of room for Washington's "Red rider." As between the Senate's action in voting for clear-cut repeal and the House's more timid decision to modify but not wholly eliminate Mr. Blanton's gift, choice is not difficult. As Massachusetts is showing, the way to repeal is to repeal.

Keats' Sweetheart.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

All our lives we have been told that Fanny Brawne, who was the sweetheart of John Keats, was cold and unappreciative of him. It never seemed possible that anyone of such a flaming personality as John Keats could have been used or duped by someone who must be supposed both inferior and unkind.

Now we know definitely that it was not so. The Oxford University Press has just published "Letters of Fanny Brawne to Fanny Keats, 1820-1824." They tell the story. Fanny Brawne was a typical English girl of her time, rather more intelligent than the run of her sisters, reticent, possessed of excellent taste. She was such a woman as you might have expected John Keats to love—loyal, unobtrusive, thoughtful. She was a fit mate for the man who, Kipling and Alfred Noyes said, wrote the most perfect line that any poet ever created in English.

LaGuardia's Inconsistency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If our Secretary of State is hampered by our attitude to free speech from anything but mild protests over the utterances of the Mayor of New York concerning Hitler, then free speech through both press and rostrum should let that opportunist know the flimsyness of his denunciations. If Mayor LaGuardia is sincerely desirous to have subjects for his "chamber of horrors," why does he select Hitler rather than the dictator of Italy? The former is but a mild reflection of the latter. If the New York Mayor is speaking for home consumption merely, then what will his Jewish friends think of Mussolini's late flirtation with the Moslems? Does he not see that while Hitler is an upstanding, outright and frank anti-Semitist, that Mussolini by seeking to identify himself with the Moslems is striking at the homeland idea of the Jew whose Moslem antagonists in Palestine would welcome such an ally as Mussolini?

Nothing less than demagogism can excuse itself for attacking Hitler as brutal, and omitting mention of Mussolini. Not to mention his invasion of Ethiopia, his late wholesale slaughter of hundreds of those people for an uprising against his assumed domination, suggests not Attila the Hun or the Duke of Alva, as some have mentioned, but Nero, the pagan butcher. Whatever Hitler has done to religion or to people of an alien religion to Germany, casts but a shadow over our church and political fields compared with the destruction of this Italian dictator, who under the guise of religion and with the tacit consent and even blessing of the head of the church to which this man belongs, is bringing the church into disrepute and fostering anti-democratic ideas among all peoples. If Mr. LaGuardia or any one else would denounce Hitler, let him in even stronger terms denounce Mussolini, else write himself down as a demagogue. J. O. KNOTT.

Income Tax Exemptions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some newspaper correspondents have apparently become much exercised over the decision of the Supreme Court in the Brush case in which the court held that the salary of an employe of the City of New York was not subject to the Federal income tax, and have as usual gone haywire on the subject. One writer deplores the fact that half a million State and municipal employes pay no Federal income tax, which results in an additional burden upon those who do pay such tax.

This decision of the court is in harmony with the principle laid down by Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for a unanimous court, in the celebrated case of McCulloch vs. Maryland. The exemption of such employes is not intended for their personal interest or benefit, but is primarily and solely in the interest of and for the protection of the State or municipality as the case may be, for as the Chief Justice said in the McCulloch case if the power to tax is admitted it is without limitation, and is therefore the power to destroy. If the Federal Government can tax the agencies or instrumentalities of the State or vice versa it would then be within the power of the one or the other to handicap, cripple, or destroy the proper and effective functioning of such government.

The decision of the court in the Brush case is consistent, sound, and in harmony with commonsense, and of the imperative necessities of the orderly and effective operations of the respective governments. A. S. L.

Sympathy For Dr. Townsend.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is the opinion of the writer that, instead of being sentenced to fine and imprisonment for walking out on the so-called "investigating committee," Dr. Townsend should be awarded a medal, or at least an engraved copy of Magna Carta, for his refusal to reply to such t addle.

Such impertinence on the part of grave and dignified "leaders" of a great Nation's Government is on a par with the pretended investigation of the charges made by Dr. Wirt, which resulted in nothing but a personal investigation of Dr. Wirt himself.

United States Of The World?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another peace plan?

There is one cause of international conflict. It is the defense attitude of nations. Defense attitudes are the result of patriotism—we are so in love with our countries we will defend them against anything, even common sense. All attacks made by so-called peace-lovers against the impending war clouds are begun on the assumption that our particular country is the best. Naturally, without even giving second thought to the assumption—we have heard it all our lives. This screwed-up logic is our heritage!

Do away with patriotism—not good patriotism, of course; it is human nature to love the scenes of childhood—but do away with all organized societies that pound in our heads from the first grade that the Government, the principles, etc., of our country are best—and should be defended with our lives.

Here's how to do away with patriotism—let these United States, through its Congress, extend to the other nations of the earth an invitation to join, each as a State in this Union.

That is all.

If the question of permanent peace on this earth is ever to be settled, I know of no better way of leaving it up to definite action. Just plain talk of peace would be out of place then. If people really want peace, if they are willing to shake off the old conceit of country-love, such an invitation could be extended, and could be accepted.

If there were no need for defense attitudes, there would be no need for standing armies, arms races, and best of all, peace conferences.

Beguiled Pacifists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of March 5, "A Mess of Pottage," I note that "our incredibly gullible pacifists" are accused of being beguiled by the peace act of 1937 into a pitiable belief that somehow this will further disarmament.

I have always supposed that pacifists, as distinguished from "lovers of peace—but," were altogether opposed to armaments. I note that you criticize "neutrality" legislation as preventing us from taking sides in a war on "moral" grounds. In view of our experience with "moral aims" in the late war and of the general consensus that in a modern war "nobody wins," I have always supposed that the aim of such legislation was to keep us from taking sides—except in favor of sanity. As Dick Sheppard said the other day, a bomb labeled "With love from Geneva" will kill as many women and children as one from the airplane of a wicked dictator.

CHARLES L. CARHART.

For A District Track.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The opponents of the District racetrack bill, instead of opposing the measure, could accomplish something of real financial benefit to the District and its citizens through a boycott of all Maryland racetracks.

It is notorious the way the betting public is consistently robbed at these tracks, Pimlico, perhaps, excepted. Let an observer notice the discrepancy between the prospective odds and the actual pay-off of the winning horse.

Often has this writer seen instances where a winning mutual, on pre-race odds, could reasonably be expected to pay seven or eight to one ($16 or $18), but when the pay-off is posted he received probably $7.80 or $9 for the regular $2 investment.

The excuse offered by the tracks is that "comeback" money reduced the pay-off price.

At Hialeah and Santa Anita tracks the pre-race odds on a horse are invariably a fair indication of what a winning ticket will pay. However, in Maryland the "take" at the tracks has become a racket.

A racetrack in the District with two meets a year would bring a substantial financial return to the District and save its citizens millions of dollars that otherwise would go to the Maryland tracks.

CHARLES O. PIERCE.

Behind The Sit-Down Strikes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The most serious menace to the liberties of this country today is the "sit-down" strike. And of all the classes participating in these strikes the most disgusting is the apparent "sit-down" of all the executive departments of the Government, from sheriffs up.

Why do these officials imagine the public pays them? It seems to be the prudent policy of these officers to let strikers and other disturbers of the peace decide what they want and let them take it regardless of law and court orders.

This lawless attitude on the part of strikers is only a reflection of the disrespectful attitude the executive branch of the Government has maintained toward the judicial branch throughout this Administration.

Are these supine surrenders of our rights by those who swear to uphold and defend the law to be regarded as sit-down strikes by executive branches of the Government? Or can it be possible that the executive branch is so busy trying to usurp the functions of the legislative and judicial branches that it has no time to do the things it is paid to do? C. M. DODSON.
East Falls Church, Va., March 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like all persons who read a great deal and think occasionally, the labor situation confronting us has aroused me to considerable alarm. As a matter of fact, however, the Senate investigations of labor espionage conditions alarmed me before the sit-down strike had become a by-word, although I often had to hunt in the back pages of the paper to get my information. Not so with sit-down strikes, which glare at one from the front pages, together with comments, cartoons or editorials. Yet who can deny that the autocratic and uncivilized way in which industrial concerns attempted to handle labor sowed the seeds for those acts which today hurt so strongly at worse conditions which might come?

It may be that the findings of the Senate investigating committee should have been hidden more completely than they were. They only revealed, however, what labor has known for years. If truth is dangerous we should surely stop teaching those words in the preamble to the Declaration of Independence: "We hold these truths to be self-evident——." If anything can make a man dissatisfied with life as a miner, a worker under the speed-up system, or even a clerk or a tenant farmer or whathave-you, it is too much reflection about life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness under conditions such as he is too often entitled to "enjoy."

Some years ago, the writer visited with great interest several rather exciting farmers' holiday meetings in a State where farms were being saved by a few dollars and a business-like appearing crowd. The newspapers decried these revolutionary tendencies—with alarm. But the mere suggestion that a farmer's business should be conducted, if not with profit, at least in such a way as to make certain his cost of production, was consistently fought by every large newspaper in the State. Is there any easier way to turn farmers into revolutionists?

Curio Shop.

THE house is tall and narrow and was built of red brick years ago. It stands a short way north of Thomas Circle on Fourteenth street. The street is busy there and seems forever filled with the impatient noise of shrieking motor horns and clanging trolleys. But the house does not notice this. Leading from the sidewalk up to its door are old iron steps, and looking out onto the street is a large window filled with curios.

Through the winter dusk I walked slowly past the house and stopped to stare at the windows. In its center was a chair and a little sign that said, "This chair served Abraham Lincoln in the White House. On either side of the chair, banked by dozens of varied evidences of a collector's interest, were two plates, bearing the President's crest, that also had served Mr. Lincoln. "Why don't they have," I thought, "something of Gen. Lee's?" I moved on, and saw a card in the door above the steps that said, "Open. Walk in." I turned up the steps.

There were two doors, and as I closed the second one behind me an old gentleman rose from among the shadows. "Good afternoon," I said. "For seven years I've been passing your shop and I just wanted to come in."

"Well," he answered in the tone of one to whom seven years are nothing, "Come in."

The room had been a "front parlor" years ago. Now it was filled with bric-a-brac, paintings, brasses, old engravings, batiks, half-hidden pieces of furniture, Indian trophies, a thousand and one articles of virtu. Slowly I passed from one to another of them, asking questions which the old gentleman answered. I stopped in front of a painting. "That's a Frans Hals," he said. "Hals, you know was the greatest portrait painter of Holland, after Rembrandt."

I moved on toward the rear of the room. Here the shadows were deeper, but not deep enough to hide the portrait before me. A man's face stood out in the gloom, a man wearing a soldier's uniform of an army that has not existed for more than 70 years.

It was Gen. Lee. And against the frame of the portrait hung his army sash, maroon and faded, its tassel frayed now by the years.

"Yes," the old gentleman said, "that's really the General's own sash. And that portrait was considered by his daughter, Miss Mary Lee, to be the best likeness of her father she ever saw. It was painted from life. She used to come up from Richmond—she's dead now—and sit here by the hour looking at it. I had the picture upstairs then, and once she stayed so long I forgot she was here.

"When the war was over I was just a little boy and this house stands in what was then part of my father's yard. His house was a little north of this one, and I remember it well. All that doesn't seem so long ago, but I guess I'm about the only person in Washington, of my age, who still lives on the same ground—so to speak—on which he was born.

"But you know, when I look back and think of the things that've happened in all that time I wonder if I'm getting old. Why, I remember when the horse cars used to go past out front, and the street was nothing but dirt. I was a student at Columbian College then, and all of us young fellows used to get on the car—you got in on the side—and ride up the hill to Euclid. Past Euclid was nothing but woods and the country. Sometimes we'd drop our money in the slide and let it run down to the till, and sometimes we didn't. Then would you hear the old man beat on the glass!

"When I went into business I was with a firm of grocers downtown. I was keeping accounts and I knew almost everybody in town. They would come in the store and order flour and hams and a barrel of whisky. Oh, yes, a barrel of whisky. That must have been 55 years ago. And next to us was a little frame building on F near Ninth that a man named Bell had taken. Bell was trying to sell stock then in a machine he'd invented that he called the telephone. And he had a devil of a time selling that stock! Nobody believed you could talk through a box on the wall.

"A fellow named Bryan—or Bryant, I'm not quite sure—was working with Bell and when I had a store of my own he came to me one day. 'Look here,' he said, 'you need one of these.' 'What for?' I said. 'Who's going to call me up?' They were putting them in for nothing just to get people to take them, and letting you have them for six months free. So I let them put it in, and sure enough people began to use the things. Now just look at the telephone.

"Yes, its' really surprising, the history of Washington. And it's not all politics either. When you've watched the city grow and change the way I've watched this one it gives you something to think about. Well, young fellow, I see you looking at your watch. I guess it is getting pretty close to suppertime. And it's getting dark here, too. I think I'll sit here a little longer though. I've kind of got started going back and, you know, remembering is part of my business. Part of my business."

Labor Lawlessness.

THE SITDOWN STRIKE is a Communist device, but the Communists surely can't be very bright, because every sitdown in this country brings fascism just that much closer.

Fascism is what happens when the people of a nationalistic country get sick and tired of the lawless goings-on of a very small minority under the guidance of Communist organizers and decide to crash through a few laws themselves to abolish the nuisance at the sacrifice of everyone's freedom. Then there are a lot of fights.

The vigilantes throw the fear of God into the whole community with promiscuous executions and cloutings, and some wild-eyed nut in a lion-tamer's uniform moves into office as dictator, babbling weird nonsense which everyone is required to believe under heavy penalties for dissent.

THIS IS a nationalistic country, with no feeling of sympathy for or solidarity with the Russians or the so-called Loyalists of Spain. This country has troubles of its own and was thoroughly cured of altruism toward the people of other countries a long time back, besides which the people are religious after a fashion, and communism means atheism, church burning and sacrilege.

This religious feeling may not be very intelligent, but it is in the character of the majority of the people whether they go to church or not, as the Ku Klux demonstrated in recent times. The Ku Klux drove a lot of otherwise harmless, amiable people nearly crazy with the most preposterous lies and had them of a mind to grab the old musket off the wall to strike for their altars and their young ones.

If that many Americans could be churned up that badly over strictly imaginary dangers rigged up by a gang of commercial promoters and ignorant preachers, what would the people do if they should see the sitdown develop into a general paralysis of business, convinced that all this represented a foul plot by Moscow?

I DON'T SUPPOSE there are many actual Communists among the sitdown strikers.

Some of the strikes have seemed rather frivolous, with the men and women clowning it for baloney pictures and conducting a dangerous business in the picnic spirit. Others are very firm, and willing to fight somewhat, but want to remain hundred per centers and not become Communists, for the very word means Russian to most Americans.

But the method of the sitdown and the aggressive persistency of this movement give it a distinctly important appearance, and, argue as you may on the fine points, Americans will lick communism if they have to wreck the democracy to remain American.

But the lawlessness of the sitdown was apparent in Flint, and there was then a disposition to rock along and look out of the window in the hope that the matter would be adjusted without a resort to law. Now, that example has led to an epidemic of sitdowns. And, with the principles unchanged but with the problem much enlarged, our best minds perceive something that was obvious 'way back when.

I AM no alarmist about fascism, much less communism, but I have canvassed this case with some very earnest parties in Washington who were full of airy optimism a little while ago, and discover that with them the sitdown is no longer a routine matter to be filed on the spike and taken up presently.

Every lawless and irresponsible exploit by labor tends to weaken labor's cause by just that much and stores up a corresponding degree of resentment among the bulk of the country, which is neither sitting down nor grinding the workingman but standing in the middle.

It may not come to that, but one thing you may gamble on. If the strikers go to the point of paralyzing the works, and then go on to sabotage, they will lose the sympathy they do enjoy now, and the nationalistic majority will chase them up the alley exactly as the Italians did. It's the vigilante in the Americans.

Annual Report Of A Modern Corporation.

To the Stockholders:

1—Huddles and Ultimatums: Your company is pleased to report that while the year represented losses in several respects, it marked distinct gains in excitement. A new high for huddling was reached as early as the first quarter. Receipts of ultimatums exceeded our production of the same for the first four months, as our plants were unequipped for quantity ultimatum production, but this was soon remedied and your company is now in a position to meet all competitors.

• • • •

2—Conferences: The corporation is able to report an increase of 72 per cent in conferences, parleys, etc. Of the 365 days, more than 361 were spent in parleys. With the approval of the stockholders, $750,000 will be expended in 1938 for a plant addition to be known as the Parley and Conference Center. It is expected that practically all the work of the company will be done there.

3—Interviews, Statements, Etc.: Exceeding all figures in the company history, your officers spent 34,567,345 hours in interviews, issuing or receiving statements, etc. Another year should see these figures doubled.

• • • •

4—Unfilled Orders: Unfilled orders for the year reached a new high for all time. In fact, all our orders are unfilled orders under present conditions. We are confident of doubling our unfilled orders without additional equipment.

• • • •

5—Equipment Outlay: New phases of relationships between employer and workers, as demonstrated during the year, will require an estimated expenditure of about $1,500,000 during the coming year for reconstructing and refitting the plant for sit-down purposes. Our chair equipment will be trebled, folding beds will be made part of the equipment of all workers, and all offices will be done over with soft upholstery. The executives might as well rest, too.

• • • •

6—Remarks: Your directors feel that the outlook is good. There is no reason why the coming year should not see our perplexities rise 100 per cent. During the last quarter things were so improved that the owners were able to get into their own plant at times and on one occasion the executives were allowed free access to their offices for almost a full week. This is encouraging. Stand by and hope for luck. You will need it.

Why Even Defenders of the Courts Go Mad.

After four circuit judges had decided that the operation of roulette and dice table under the guise of slot machines was illegal today, Vincent C. Giblen, attorney for the gambling houses, flew in a chartered airplane to Tallahassee, where he obtained an order from the Supreme Court which prevents enforcement of the decision pending a hearing April 13, by which time all the houses will have closed for the season.—News item.

The Public And The Supreme Court Proposal

'Caesarphobia' Given As Root Of Opposition

Those Seeing No Problem In Court Asked To Rid Debate Of Fog.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

At the wildly enthusiastic mass-meeting in New York March 12, many things said in defense of the judiciary by Senators Copeland, David Walsh and Burke, need to be said oftener in a time when consciences are dull to the claims of distributive justice. There is something inspiring in manifestations of popular zeal for the immunity of judges. The one institution left us by the fathers to guarantee distributive justice needs every safeguard that can be thrown around it—and equally it needs to be put into the possession of all faculties for sensing the actual conditions to which its judgments must be applied.

Against what were the speakers defending the court? "Against any change," the chairman told the crowd, and there was little in the speeches that qualified this sweeping statement. Only an infallible institution (and even then long after mighty struggles in which both sides attempted at times to exercise more powers than due and irreversible authority later decreed to be lawful) can define its own powers with finality. And no institution on earth can claim to be irreformable. The judiciary needs to be saved from those of its defenders who would treat it as though it were more superhuman than the church ever claimed to be.

The obvious aim of the President's proposal is to have Congress put the judiciary into a condition in which it can be more normally sensitive to contemporary situations.

There might conceivably be better expedients for accomplishing the reform needed than that proposed by the President. But it was the source of the proposal, rather than its merits or demerits, which drew the bitterest fire of attack. It is not surprising that we should be nervous about reform of the judiciary, as one would be about an eye or a brain operation; still less surprising when such an operation is suggested by the Executive. It chills the very marrow of our executive-distrusting liberal tradition.

Strange as it may sound, we Americans are the last of the medievals, who attempted to work out the problem of the separation and the co-ordination of distinct governmental functions. Other nations, even to a great extent Great Britain, are dominated by the absolutist tradition of the Renaissance (often mistakenly called "medieval") in which executives, cabinets or unofficial groups in parliament, guide public policy, which European judges are only too ready to support and justify. But we are so scrupulous about separation of governmental function that we have almost strangulated the institution we treat with most reverence. Eyes and brains sometimes need fresh blood to see accurately and judge justly.

Governments, under executive leadership, are everywhere today being thrown back upon the immemorial task of shepherding helpless peoples. The very simplicity of this task under the Renaissance tradition of executive immunity, imperils not only Europe but the whole world with nationalities, as solid units, at each others' throats. We contribute to the danger in exactly the opposite way—by the internal division caused by the unreasoning degree of our vigilance against executive power. We have indeed carefully guarded that function of government of which the whole world is desperately in need—the function of judicial detachment and deliberation. But we have allowed that function to become a rallying center of obstruction, not on account of any corrupt influence, but because of the mere physical fact that insight can—though it may not—decay with age.

The attacks on the President's proposal have come from two opposite directions. From one side, Mr. Roosevelt is charged with designing to pack the court; from another side, the measure is faulted because it may fail to pack the court after all! Still others hide the contradiction of the two arguments under a general appeal to distrust of executive leadership, or personal detraction of the President as unsafe and aiming at encroaching power. Can it be that this plotter of a popularized collectivism would take his chances with a mere mild operation of blood transfusion upon the judiciary? Impossible! There must be a trick somewhere. Perhaps he foresees failure of his plans and is seeking a scapegoat. So a quarter of an inch is added to the chin of the "dictator" in the cartoons, and there are alarmist editorials about "revolutionary and subversive" aims.

The dread of Caesar may have been often in the past a safeguard of liberties, but it has often been the beginning of the end of them. The desperation of Cassius and Brutus only paved the way for Antony and Augustus. In Europe the peril is that judicial tribunals tend to become "committees of public safety." Our propensity is to strike frantically at the shepherd and paralyze him, even when he is in the very act of protecting our rights. At the worst, it might be said that the President and Congress are wrestling with problems of deep perplexity, and that the ultimate solution is far from clear. But what of those who not merely have no solution, but see no problem? They might at least refrain from trying to clarify a fog of perplexity with a denser and more poisonous fog of suspicion and mistrust. Why not consider the President's proposal on its merits?

Article 5 Of The Constitution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I be permitted to explain briefly the resolve for which I am petitioning the General Court of Massachusetts, and whose object is to request Congress to call the first Federal constitutional convention in 150 years?

Article 5 of the United States Constitution provides that, on application of two-thirds of the Legislatures of the several States, Congress shall call a convention for proposing amendments to the Constitution. The benefits of this particular provision seem to have been largely overlooked in the past.

The timeliness of this proposal seems self-evident. Its practicability may not be as apparent. In the first place, it should be remembered that any amendments proposed either by Congres or by a convention are subject to ratification by the States. It is my belief that amendments emanating from a convention stand a better chance of speedy ratification than those proposed by Congress. The very political considerations which may secure relatively quick action within Congress are likely to prove the rock of partisanship on which an amendment may later break in the State Legislatures. The "still, small voice of practical politics" is not as apt to be present in a convention as in Congress.

Secondly, Congress is too busy. Its primary function is legislation rather than Constitution-making. A dispassionate and searching re-examination of our governmental structure cannot be adequately made by a body hard-pressed by such problems as neutrality, taxation, national defense and foreign trade. The remaking or clarification of the Constitution should not be a mere side line.

In the third place, congressional action is bound to be piecemeal and to leave too many issues unresolved. We are confronted not by one constitutional question, but by a multitude. Shall Congress have the power to enact welfare legislation? Shall the meaning of the due-process clause be restricted? Shall the electoral college be abolished? Shall States' rights be preserved? Shall the system of judicial review of legislation be modified? How can the fundamental guarantees of the Constitution be best maintained without hampering enlightened legislation? Should the amending process itself be modified?

There are many more such questions on which a convention can make a frontal attack. Adequate consideration by Congress would require suspension of its other activities and would involve keeping the country in the throes of a more or less perpetual constitutional crisis.

In brief, to quote the resolve, "a careful, comprehensive and impartial discharge of these far-seeing tasks"—of clarification, modification or elaboration—"is best undertaken by a body unencumbered by legislative responsibility and remote from partisan influence."

I hope that other readers of The Post will find merit in the proposal and will send in their comments.

Pro And Con

'Good Sportsmanship.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Does Justice McReynolds think that good sportsmanship requires the indefinite employment of an umpire who, whatever the reason, seems to be consistently biased in favor of the opposing team? Or is it a case of poor eyesight?

SIDELINE SITTER.

Washington, March 17.

'Most Logical Plan.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The "New Court Plan" suggested and outlined by Richard E. Wellford in your issue of March 16 is the most intelligent and logical I have yet seen presented, being totally unbiased and unprejudiced to either the personnel of the court or plan proposed by the President. It can and would function in harmony with all factions in this progressive era, and should appeal alike to all the just and sensibly inclined.

I hope it will be considered and eventually adopted.

A. W. CARTER.

'A Sense Of Guilt.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

So far the advocates of the Roosevelt change in the Supreme Court have made only one thing clear: They are desperately anxious to bring it about; so anxious that Mr. Roosevelt himself is willing to take the role of arch crisis monger.

Although a motley pattern of flimsy, inconsistent, rather cheap and disrespectful excuses have been bellowed and crooned on the helpless air, not one intellectually respectable reason for the cherished change has been advanced. These excuses, with their childish embellishments of thrusts and gibes, all require acceptance of the feeble-minded assumption that whatever the Administration wishes to do is right.

Nevertheless, one suspects that this demand for acquiescence, this excessive craving for deference and submission, is nothing more than the projection upon the Supreme Court of a sense of guilt and failure. Else why the "even more grave crisis" now imminent?

A CITIZEN.

Washington, March 15.

'The Price Of Liberty.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

When Mr. Cummings was asked if he would not raise his voice in protest were some later reactionary President to demand a two-thirds enlargement of the Supreme Court, he first evaded the issue with a wisecrack, then stated his position with amazing frankness. His concern was with the present; the future must look out for itself.

Four years ago such an avowal from the responsible head of the Department of Justice would have been unthinkable. Why is it a matter of course today?

The answer will be found in a superstition that is older than civilization itself. It is the myth of infallibility. The new era, the new moral climate, began for us when this superstition became the first article in our political creed. For proof of this read any of the speeches now being made by Democratic opponents of the President's new bid for power. With passionate eloquence they condemn the wanton assault upon our Supreme Court; with almost equal eloquence they praise the man who made it. When Mr. Roosevelt errs he has been ill-advised; when he does well his advisers are spared the limelight. The most extraordinary example of this is a recent address by Raymond Moley.

The price of liberty is still eternal vigilance; and that includes a healthy scepticism toward all popular leaders who are so wise and good that fear, suspicion, and even thought may take a holiday.

R. D. MILLER.

'Reap Sit-Down Strikes.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The President's parable of the three-horse team suits his purpose very well for he likes something he can harness and drive. He has harnessed and is driving the Congress. Now he seeks to harness and drive the court.

I suggest another parable: We can have honest baseball only when the umpires are independent of the teams and make their decisions according to the rules of the game. But when a manager selects the umpires in order to give his team the decisions, we have crooked baseball.

If the Supreme Court isn't the umpire to call decisions determining whether legislation is according to constitutional rules or not, then who, or, what is? Sow disrespect for the courts, and reap sit-down strikes.

SQUIRE DEAL.

Jefferson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Congressional Record of February 15 contains a radio address made by Senator La Follette relative to the proposed enlargement of the court. On page 1490 Senator La Follette quoted Thomas Jefferson as saying:

> It has long been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression, that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the judiciary—the irresponsible body working like gravity, by day and by night, gaining a little today and gaining a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction until all shall be usurped.

Again, the Senate Judiciary Committee on February 24, 1937, Report No. 125, reported favorably on S. 1437, relating to the disposition of cases in which the validity of acts of Congress is questioned. That report contains a memorandum by Senator McKellar, who quotes Jefferson in essentially the same words.

The following is what Thomas Jefferson actually said in a letter dated August 18, 1821, to Charles Hammond ("The Writings of Thomas Jefferson," Memorial Edition, issued under the auspices of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Association of the United States, Vol. XV, pp. 330-333):

> It has long, however, been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression (although I do not choose to put it into a newspaper, nor, like a Priam in armor, offer myself its champion), that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal judiciary; an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scarecrow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief, over the field of jurisdiction, until all shall be usurped from the States, and the government of all be consolidated into one. To this I am opposed, because, when all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another, and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated.

Washington, March 11.

The President's Errors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Where must we lay the blame for the President's astounding series of errors in recent weeks?

Surely he must have been misinformed when, as an argument for his court plan, he implied that the Supreme Court docket was overcrowded. No honorable man, holding the high office of President, would deliberately seek to accomplish an end, however worthy, by deception.

He must again have been ill-advised in the use, in his "fireside chat" last week, of a phrase from a speech delivered by Chief Justice Hughes many years ago. Surely the President would not attempt to prove his point by the deliberate distortion of the words of an opponent.

I have given only two instances but these two instances could be multiplied many times. It is inconceivable to me that a President of the United States would stoop to such unscrupulous tactics. Surely it must be done by ignorance and not by intention. And if by ignorance—then the blame rests upon his advisers. He has said that he needs six advisers with "a passion for anonymity." His advisers' passion for anonymity is easily understandable in view of the number of errors they have been allowing the President to make!

DeTocqueville

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been re-reading DeTocqueville's "Democracy in America." In this book he has set down the reflections growing out of this study of our American Institutions in a visit to this country almost exactly 100 years ago. These reflections describe with astonishing accuracy certain tendencies and happenings of our own times.

Speaking of the judicial power amongst the democratic nations of Europe, as well as amongst others, including our own, he says: "The elder judicial power retains its independence, but its jurisdiction is narrowed and there is a growing tendency to reduce it to be exclusively the arbiter between private interests. As judges cannot be dispensed with, at least the state is to select them and always to hold them under its control so that between the government and private individuals they place the effigy of justice rather than justice itself."

DeTocqueville in another place calls attention to the unwise, not to say indecent, haste with which a government often seeks to attain ends which may be good in themselves, and the word "revolution" which he uses may well be applied to the violent changes characteristic of our own time. "As the ordinary notions of equity and morality no longer suffice to explain and justify all the innovations begotten by a revolution, the principle of public utility is called in, the doctrine of political necessity conjured up, and men accustom themselves to sacrifice private interests without scruple and to trample on the rights of individuals in order more speedily to accomplish any public purpose."

He concludes: "To lay down extensive but distinct and settled limits to the action of the government, to confer certain rights upon private persons and to secure to them the undisputed enjoyment of those rights, to enable individual man to retain whatever independence, strength and original power he still possesses, to raise him by the side of society at large and uphold him in that position, these appear to me the main objects of legislatures in the ages upon which we are now entering."

CHARLES ALEXANDER RICHMOND.

Washington, March 18.

Mr. Roosevelt's Assurances.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The President's misnamed "fireside chat" (for whoever heard of a chat where only one person could speak) ran true to form. He wished to preserve the Constitution, interpreted as he desires, for, obviously, any interpretation must be of a sinful nature, if unacceptable to him. Frankfurter, Lewis and Madam Perkins. Then to reassure the public as to the purity of his intentions, he says, in substance, "You know me and you have my assurances that nothing wrong or harmful may be feared."

Yes, Mr. President, we have had your assurances, then called promises, before this, and we know just how much they are worth. In your first campaign, you made express promises that if elected you would reduce taxation, would balance the budget, would reduce the expenses of running the Government, and would cut down the number of employes.

In the same campaign you promised to stand by the Democratic platform "100 per cent;" that platform called for no tampering with the currency. During the campaign some Republicans charged that you were planning to debase the currency. Senator Glass was indignant, and in a speech denounced all such fears and promised that the soundness of the currency would be maintained. You telegraphed Senator Glass, approving his speech, and congratulating him upon it. Then immediately on your inauguration you secured legislation debasing the currency about 41 per cent and secured, and still have authority to reduce it about 9 per cent more, which you may or may not use.

Yes, we know how to value your promises. Wise Ben Franklin, for whom you are most inappropriately named, said that when a man abused his confidence and cheated him, the man was to be blamed. "But," added the old man, "when the same man does it to me a second time, I am to be blamed for my folly in trusting him."

'Gambler's Chance.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A tremendous amount of balderdash has been written about the Supreme Court. There is no intelligent reason why the Supreme Court should not be required to render a unanimous decision, just as a jury of 12 men. It is pitiful to think that for years we have left weighty decisions of national moment to the gambler's chance of a 5-4 bet. In other words, among men of such high judicial stature failure to unanimously agree should be proof in itself that the subject matter before them is merely one of dispute between divided interests and not at all a question of constitutionality.

AN OBSERVER.

'Poor, Gullible Americans.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Poor, gullible, undernourished-minded Americans! They have listened to a man possessed of speech and promises most alluring. Some of them are still willing to follow him over an unknown trail he is attempting to blaze, whereas America's safest constitutional highway provides the greatest safeguards to the present and future generations. Sane thinking Americans will be beware of this venturesome scout.

High Integrity Seen Marking AAA Decision

Significant Supreme Court Ruling Found Lacking In 'Contumacy.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

One of my reactions to the Supreme Court controversy caused me to go back and examine some of the decisions that led to the President's startling proposal and the turmoil that has followed.

Perhaps the two most important were the NRA decision and the AAA decision. The first was unanimous and is not much discussed. The second was a 6-to-3 decision and the division in the court is pointed to as evidence of a reasonable doubt that, in the public interest, should have reversed the finding. It may be said, for what it is worth, that the majority opinion was delivered by Mr. Justice Roberts, who was about 61, and the minority opinion by Mr. Justice Stone, who was about three years older.

The main facts in the case and the gist of the opinions may be rather simply stated. Money was to be collected by the Government from the processors (manufacturers) of cotton and paid to the farmers to compensate them for agreed reduction of their cotton acreage and to supplement the purchasing power of their crop. Presumably, the processor would add his enforced contribution to his prices, where possible, thus passing it on to the consumer. While this case dealt with cotton, the law applied to agricultural products generally. The majority of the court found no authority in the Constitution for such an undertaking by the Federal Government, but carefully avoided criticism of the intended results of the scheme. Said the majority, through Judge Roberts:

This court neither approves nor condemns any legislative policy. Its delicate and difficult office is to ascertain and declare whether the legislation is in accordance with, or in contravention of, the provisions of the Constitution; and, having done that, its duty ends. The question is not what power the Federal Government ought to have, but what powers in fact have been given by the people.

The minority, on the other hand, held that the collections from the processors were tax collections; and that the Federal Government had a right, under the Constitution, to distribute the proceeds for the purposes of the act.

I can find no evidence of senility or contumacy in either of these opinions. Both reflect nothing but the highest intelligence and ability, with a profound sense of obligation to duty. That the conclusions differed is but an example of what was anticipated when the court was formed. The minority members are being praised for their course in dissenting; but if both sides voted in accordance with their convictions that is the only bravery we have any right to expect from a judge. There is apparently a singular view among the supporters of the court plan, lawyers as well as laymen, that the so-called "mandate" of recent elections should be operative upon the courts as well as upon the President and Congress.

The AAA decision was handed down early in January, 1936. If immediate steps had been taken to secure a constitutional amendment enlarging the power of Congress it is very probable that such an amendment would have been ratified before now. That is still the proper course. Why not strike directly at the true cause of the trouble? While the various substitute plans proposed, such as changing the majority rule, provision for overriding by Congress, changing the number of judges, or appointing judges for limited years, are preferable to the President's proposal, all are more or less objectionable. Their consideratoin will dissipate the efforts of the opposition, and will permit, if it does not encourage, a continuance of the crude and most unjust attacks upon the members of our highest court.

Censorship Across Borders.

AS AN AFTERMATH of the "La Guardia incident," certain newspapers in Germany have now come forward with the plea that Congress make it a penal offense for any American to "insult" the head of a foreign nation.

Many will be inclined to dismiss this suggestion as another typical display of Nazi obtuseness. But there is much more to it than that. For the dominant idea back of this suggestion is that continued good relations between the United States and the Third Reich can only be maintained if the long arm of Nazi censorship is permitted to reach out across the Atlantic.

• • • •

FASCISM, said Mussolini long ago, is not an article of export. That was never wholly true. In view of what is happening in Spain it is certainly less true now than ever. For there is between Fascist states and the democracies of the world a fundamental antagonism which can only be overcome or neutralized through the spiritual conquest of democratic peoples by the dictators.

The democratic nations may assume and may act on the assumption that diversity in forms of government as in everything else is a good thing; that each people is entitled to live under whatever political system it chooses, be it democratic, communistic, fascist, theocratic, feudal or whatnot; and that the presence in the world of such varying systems need not preclude harmonious international relations.

But the totalitarian states cannot accept this thesis. Until recently Russia did not do so and now Italy and Germany do not. To these totalitarian states the very existence of powerful democratic nations determined to prove the workability of democracy constitutes the most fundamental of all dangers.

NO ONE has brought this out better than Hamilton Fish Armstrong, editor of Foreign Affairs, in his splendid little book, "We or They." (MacMillan, $1.50) which should be required reading for all those who believe in the democratic way of life.

Said Mussolini in October, 1930 (as cited by Armstrong):

"The struggle between two worlds can permit no compromise . . . Either we or they; Either their ideas or ours! Either our state or theirs!"

And similarly, Hitler in Mein Kampf:

"Either the world will be governed by the ideology of modern democracy, in which case every issue will be decided in favor of the numerically stronger races; or it will be ruled by the laws of force, when the peoples of brutal determination, not those that show self-restraint, will triumph."

IN A DEMOCRACY the clash of ideas and ideologies is regarded as a healthy phenomenon. That is why the most jealously guarded of our liberties are those respecting freedom of speech, press and conscience.

In totalitarian states, however, these very liberties are viewed with the deepest suspicion. That is why in such states every vestige of freedom of expression has been wiped out. Yet this fundamental aim of controlling all avenues of information and expression cannot, in the modern world, be complete as long as in the outside world the freedom to inform, to explain and to criticize continues to exist.

For no nation can be hermetically sealed against all outside influences. No customs barriers, no police cordons, no barbed wire barricades can forever keep out ideas. Sooner or later by a process of osmosis what is known on the free side of a border will penetrate the unfree side. No wonder, then, that the dictators, having kicked truth out of the door, live in a perpetual state of fear that it will fly in through the window.

FROM ONE ANGLE the sensitivity of Fascist dictatorships to foreign opinion is an extremely curious phenomenon. Those regimes are based on a denial of all law transcending the national will to power. How ruthless they can be in the exercise of that will Nazi Germany's treatment of the Jews, Fascist Italy's war on Ethiopia and its aftermath in the recent blood purge at Addis Ababa and the joint German-Italian intervention in Spain abundantly indicate. Yet the totalitarian regimes, even while defying world public opinion, continue to court it with astonishing assiduity.

It needs hardly be emphasized that the totalitarian states are not threatened by the democracies either militarily or economically. There is no territory that the dictatorships possess which the democracies covet; the latter are only too willing to pursue a policy of live and let live. Yet the dictatorships nonetheless fear the democracies whom they have so effectively browbeaten during recent years. They fear the wealth and power of the democracies. Above all they fear those states because they are democracies.

As Armstrong points out:

> "A dictatorship must always feel itself in danger so long as democratic states continue to be its neighbors, reminding its people in many ways, not matter how stringent the censorship, that there still is in the world such a thing as freedom. Without the last great victory over every stronghold of the intransigeant liberal spirit—the spirit which holds that the price would still be too big even if an autocrat government were able to produce all the material rewards which it promises—the dictator cannot consider any of his other victories safe or complete."

THERE WAS a time, not so long distant, when twisting the British lion's tail was one of the most popular of political sports in the United States. In those days public men did not hesitate to employ toward Great Britain and Britain's leaders language that was far more virulent than that used by La Guardia in speaking of Hitler. There was, for instance, the case of Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, and King George V.

So far as anyone knows these attacks never aroused the slightest peep out of the British monarch or led to any representations being made by Downing Street to the State Department. Whenever such remarks have exceeded the bounds of truth, decency or good behavior they have supplied their own corrective.

Things are different now. And the difference is precisely the difference between democracies and dictatorships. The Nazi regime does not feel it can afford to be as indifferent to American attacks as was Great Britain. Nor is Nazi anger alone the result of the fact that it was the mayor of an American city who gave vent to his dislike of the Fuehrer.

The real quarrel is with the freedom of speech and the press, sometimes even to the point of undiplomatic bluntness, that obtains in the United States. It is this freedom to which they object; and which they will continue to denounce regardless of how numerous and how earnest the official American apologies may be. For what is sought, and the Nazi suggestion to Congress is proof of it, is the extension to the United States of that same blanket of silence, so far as unpleasant German developments are concerned, that already hangs like a pall over the Third Reich.

A Good Book

By William Lyon Phelps.

"We Are Not Alone."

This is the title of a book that I have been eagerly awaiting since June 3, 1934, the day when I read "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." I am not ashamed to say that I loved both Mr. Chips and the novel, of which he is the herb. And I had no sooner finished that book than I looked around for others by the same writer. There were 12 other published novels by him, and within 12 months I had read every one of them, and while I liked "Lost Horizon" best of all, I also liked most of the others.

• • • •

The new novel, the first to appear in three years, is called "We Are Not Alone." The title may be meant to be comforting, but I think it has only tragic connotation. You remember when Mephistopheles was trying to convince Faust that he was making too much fuss over the betrayal and imprisonment of Margaret, he attempted to make light of the matter by saying, "She is not the first." The result of such a remark was to add fuel to the flames of Faust's indignation and remorse.

Mr. Hilton has always been cruel to his heroines; they generally fail to survive to the last page, and in "And Now, Goodbye," the heroine is burned to death in a railway accident; in "We Are Not Alone" she is hanged.

2 Fur Thieves Killed, 2 Seized In Police Trap

Fifth Is Wounded as Guns Blaze in Crowded N. Y. Street.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 19.—Two men died in blazing gunfire, one was wounded and two others were captured as police sprung a trap on a gang of suspected fur thieves late today.

The men were shot after holding up a fur manufacturer's shop in crowded Twent-ninth street.

Hundreds of fur workers, on their way home from work, saw the battle. Ten shots were fired by the large detail of detectives who had surrounded the building and were waiting for the men to come out.

The two who were killed were holding fully loaded revolvers when they were shot. They were Julius Richman, 33, and Joseph Epstein, 44, both of Brooklyn. The wounded man was James Thompson, 21, also of Brooklyn.

The arrested identified themselves as David Silvers, 33; Joseph Catrone, 27, and George Blickendorf, 27. They all gave Brooklyn addresses.

The six men entered the building at 4:50 p. m. and went to the second floor where they held up nine persons in the establishment of Bleiweis and Co., locked them in a fur vault and seized furs valued at $25,000, police said.

In the meantime, 15 detectives who had been trailing the alleged gang for more than a week had surrounded the building. Other detectives joined them. As the holdup men put the furs on a truck in front of the building, police closed in and the shooting started.

Rand Strike End Delayed at Parley

Acceptance of the terms by which the prolonged Remington-Rand strike would be settled was delayed yesterday following a conference of strikers' representatives with Arthur O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists. The terms had been arranged at a conference with James H. Wharton said some of the union representatives did not arrive here until late in the day and insufficient time was available for complete discussion and decision of the settlement plan. The meeting will be continued today.

Also participating in the conference was John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor. The strikers' committee included Vernon M. Crofoot, Syracuse, N. Y.; Arthur L. Giles and Harold Beer, Ilion, N. Y.; David Lozo, Tonawanda, N. Y.; Clair Bellows, Syracuse; A. C. Wegelo, Norwood, Ohio, and H. E. Anderson, Middleton, Conn.

'Front Yard Plane' Costs $25—and It Works

He flies through the air, does this Newport News, Va., boy, and he is authority for the statement that his home-made midwing monoplane is the finest in the air. It cost $25 "and a lot of hard work," he says, and it's worth it—every inch of its fabric. His name is Douglas Mellor, and he has demonstrated his 'sky baby' in a short hop. He says it is due to have a cruising speed of 50 miles an hour and a top speed of 60.

Women's Club Session Will Assail Alien Philosophies in U. S. Schools

Mrs. Whitehurst to Present Resolution Attacking Reported Move.

Reported indoctrination of alien philosophies in American schools in the United States will be attacked by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, chairman of the department of education of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the annual council meeting to be held in Tulsa, Okla., April 26 to April 30.

Mrs. Whitehurst will present a resolution opposing "the system now prevalent under which some teachers in our schools, under the guise of free speech and liberal thought, are forcing their own philosophy of government on our students, many of these philosophies being out of sympathy with the American form of government."

A second resolution would provide that the general federation advocate "the use of every reasonable effort to prevent school buildings and other public buildings from being used by subversive organizations for the promulgation of their propaganda, in order that children in the formative years of their lives may be imbued with loyalty and patriotism rather than be subjected to communistic and other corrupt influences."

The New Jersey State Federation will present a resolution which has been indorsed by Mrs. Whitehurst that State and city federations and clubs be urged to further the establishment of special programs of adult education in order to safeguard democratic ideals, train citizens in the critical evaluation of current opinion and to aid them in assuming their responsibilities as citizens.

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the federation, with a view to determining the sentiment of club women on the judiciary reorganization question, sent out a communication to the presidents of all State federations suggesting that they conduct polls of their clubs and refer the tabulated results to Washington headquarters. Returns from this poll probably will be made known at the council meeting.

Third of Notorious Maryland Brothers Pleads Guilty to Charge.

Milburn, "Pee Wee," Read, brother of William B. Read, notorious Four-Corners, Md., gangster awaiting trial in Charleston, W. Va., for the murder of William E. Dollman, yesterday was sentenced to ten years in prison by Judge Charles W. Woodward, in Rockville, on a charge of conspiracy to murder.

Sentence followed a plea of guilty entered by Read. The case grew out of the plot to rob Henry Hiser, manager of the State Theater, in Bethesda, Md.

Read, with Lawrence Gingell, also held in the Dollman case, was ready to hold up Hiser when they were frightened away by a police scout car.

In receiving a ten-year sentence, Read became the third of three brothers to be in prison for their crimes. Edward B. Read, the second brother, is now doing ten years for the attempted murder of an Arlington County realtor.

The elder Read also is to be charged with the murder of Elwood Matthews, aged recluse farmer, as soon as the Dollman case is ended.

German Tells Of Hazardous Arabian Trip

The first European to cross the desolate, jealously guarded interior of southwestern Arabia and live to tell the tale, Hans Helfritz, described his adventures in this almost unknown country in an illustrated lecture last night before the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall.

Twice Helfritz was imprisoned by the Arab sultans who rule in this region, and he was constantly under suspicion during his travels. Not only was he the first European known to have penetrated the area but was the first white man ever seen by some of the Bedouin tribes living in the more remote parts of the desert and adjoining mountains.

The German explorer visited and photographed the "skyscrapers of the desert," structures built of mud with no reinforcements except palm logs, but attaining in some cases a height of 12 stories. Many of them were built 200 or 300 years before skyscrapers here were thought of.

Capital Minister Publishes Book

A new book, "A Reasonable Faith," has just been published by Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, minister of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. Based on a series of lectures given first in his own church, and then later at Milwaukee-Downer College, Dr. Clinchy has addressed his book to the men and women who, "confused by the feeling that the older forms of religious belief which their fathers held are no longer tenable in the modern world, seek the basis for a fresh and vital belief."

The author, who has been minister of the Mount Pleasant Church since 1931, has approached religion by the method of reaching conclusions through experience and research. It is Dr. Clinchy's conviction that there is an eager and wistful desire for real religious knowledge and experience on the part of countless men and women in the world who have become bewildered by the maze of modern knowledge. The book is an attempt to show them that they not only may be religious, but are religious.

Dr. Clinchy was born in New York City and educated at Columbia University and Drew Theological Seminary, with graduate work at Yale University. He was the Associate Minister at the Broadway Tabernacle, New York before coming to his present church in Washington. The book is published by Willett, Clark & Co., of Chicago.

'Matter' Subject Of Lesson Sermon

"Matter" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Isaiah 43:12: "I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, when there was no strange god among you: therefore ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness." (Psalms 143:10).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The footsteps of thought, rising above material standpoints are slow, and portend a long night to the traveller; but the angels of His presence—the spiritual intuitions that tell us when the night is far spent, the day is at hand'—are our guardians in the gloom."

Saturday Sermonette

By the Rev. Arthur P. Wilson,
Pastor of the Columbia Heights Christian Church.

Text: "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name given under heaven whereby we must be saved."

The statement of the Apostle Peter to the Sanhedrin has been open to challenge all through the ages as an unwarrantable assumption, yet it is but one phase of a universal postulate.

Breaches of natural law destroy physical life. Our own economic system is before the bar of justice in that it has ignored divine sanctions. Our social life is suffering because of disobedience to funndamental laws laid down by the Creator. Our mental and emotional life, a matter of grave moment today, must be brought back into line with the Law of God.

In other words, our physical, mental, economic and social well being are dependent upon alignment with the laws of God. The scientist, the economist, the psychologist are simply seekers after that law.

This being true, it is not too much to say that our spiritual salvation must depend upon that One who came to correct our false ideas of God and to point us the way to Him. He himself says, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." If our physical salvation depends on our knewledge of the ways of God, then our spiritual salvation must depend upon our understanding of Jesus Christ and our practice of those principles which He received from the Father.

There has never been any other way. God revealed Himself fully and finally in His Son. All the prophets and seers of old could ever do was to point to Him. All that the greatest minds since His day can do is to interpret Him. He is the way, the truth and the life.

Dr. Hans Luther Is Host At Dinner and Musicale

Ambassador of Germany Presents Mme. Grete Stueckgold, Metropolitan Opera Star, in Program of Lieder at Embassy.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther, last night was host at a dinner for 30 at the Embassy and later entertained 200 additional guests at a musicale, presenting the distinguished German star of the Metropolitan Opera, Mme. Grete Stueckgold.

Mme. Stueckgold, who has appeared here on several occasions on Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concert series and has many friends in the Capital, gave a program chiefly of German lieder. Her accompanist was Mr. Conrad van Bos, of New York, who also has accompanied several of the artists heard at the musicales at the White House this season.

She included songs by Schubert, Mozart, Beethoven, Strauss and a closing group of Hugo Wolf. Zueignung, by Strauss, which she sang at the end of her second group, particularly delighted the enthusiastic company of guests. Mme. Steuckgold's husband, Gustav Schuetzendorf, who was to have been on the program, presenting a group of Schubert songs, was unable to sing because of a cold, the host announced, and instead, Mr. Bos played a Chopin and a Brahms number.

After the guests were seated in the music room of the embassy, with its paneled walls of gold brocade and rose-flowered hangings, Mme. Steuckgold entered on the arm of the Ambassador. She wore a gown of white with clusters of rose and blue flowers. At the close of the second group on her program, Dr. Luther presented her with a bouquet of American beauty roses.

Among the guests were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, in a gown of gold lame, who sat in front with Representative Edith Nourse Rogers. Beside them were the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Senor Don Andres Pastoriza and his brother-in-law, the Dominican Minister to London, Senor Don Henriques Urena. Across the aisle were the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla, the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito, and Miss Janet Richards.

When supper was served in the banquet hall of the embassy, the Ambassador led the way with Mrs. Swanson and Mme. Saito. The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter came in with the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz. Mme. Peter wore a gown with a bodice of gold, edged in green, and Mme. Wankowicz was in black. Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard were among the guests, having come from the meeting of the National Geographic Society which had been addressed earlier in the evening by Mr. Hans Helfert, who was also present at the musicale. His subject before the Geographis Society had been Arabia, and his interest in that country, he said, resulted from its music, which originally took him there.

Among others in the company were Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, in a gown of white; Baroness von Below, wearing black velvet and silver; Senator Arthur Capper, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell, the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy and Mme. Coppola, the Counselor of the Yugoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic, the latter in a gown of gold mesh; Mrs. Heywood, wife of the commercial secretary of the British Embassy, in a gown of powder blue, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop, who had been among the dinner guests.

The Counselor of Embassy and Frau Thomsen, the First Secretary and Frau Scholz, the Third Secretary and Frau Blankenhorn, Dr. Ernest W. Meyer and others of the Embassy staff, assisted the host in welcoming the guests and seeing to their enjoyment. Frau Thomsen wore a gown in a green-gold shade with a cape of green velvet thrown over her shoulders, Frau Scholz was in a frock of red moire with a train and Frau Blankenhorn wore black. The decorations of the Embassy, both in the music room and in the banquet room were red roses and carnations.

Dr. Rowe and Dr. de Alba Issue Bids For Musicale at Pan-American Union

The Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, and the Assistant Director, Dr. Pedro de Alba, have issued invitations for a musicale on Wednesday evening, April 14, in honor of Pan-American Day.

The noted Brazilian soprano, who has made such a sensation at the Metropolitan Opera this season, Mme. Bidu Sayao, will be presented as guest artist in a concert of Latin-American music by the United Service Orchestra.

There will also be a brief address, as there was last year, by the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, chairman of the governing board of the Pan American Union.

The annual concert, although held inside the Pan-American Building, in the large ballroom, heralds the series of summer programs to which the members of Washington society look forward each season.

Greek Minister Gives Farewell Dinner For Retiring Netherlands Counselor, Wife

The Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicillianos, entertained at a farewell dinner last evening in honor of the retiring Counselor of The Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Breugel Douglas. They will sail March 27 for Athens, where Baron Douglas has been appointed Minister.

The other guests were the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik; the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Princess de Ligne; Mrs. Victor Mallet, wife of the Counselor of the British Embassy; Mr. Wallace Murray, of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Paul K. Fisher, Mrs. Pearson Rust and Miss Agnes Sholes.

Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister, will entertain at a luncheon today at the legation on Kalorama Circle.

The Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis entertained at a dinner last evening at the legation and will give another dinner tonight.

Mlle. Zazi Aranha, daughter of the Ambassador of Brazil, has left for a motor trip to Florida. She was accompanied by her young sister, Dedi Aranha; Senora de Lobo, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Embassy, and Mr. Guilio Vargas, son of the President of Brazil, who is a student at Johns Hopkins University.

Mrs. Keyes to Give "Book Party" Tomorrow at Barnett Home

Frances Parkinson Keyes is giving another "book party" tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. George Barnett, where she is staying. The wife of the former Senator from New Hampshire has asked a few of her friends to a buffet supper to celebrate the appearance of her new volume, "Written in Heaven," the story of her experiences last summer, in a French convent at Lisieux. Mrs. Keyes says she thoroughly enjoyed every minute of her stay, which lasted three months.

The book was originally to have appeared on Tuesday, 18 years to a day since Mrs. Keyes' first book was published. And, by another coincidence, this is also the birthday of Mrs. Keyes' oldest son. However, the book will come out a little later this week than originally expected.

Miss Maxine Farley, daughter of Representative James I. Farley, of Indiana, and Mrs. Farley, is entertaining a group of friends at a luncheon today in the main dining room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

The United States Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, is staying at the Carlton Hotel. He returned to Washington yesterday after spending some time with President Roosevelt in Warm Springs, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Lewis, of New York City, are in Washington and are spending a few days at the Shoreham before going to Palm Beach and St. Augustine, Fla.

Mrs. Samuel Steinberger has returned from Florida, where she spent several weeks.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Lyla Townsend's telephone in her apartment at the Shoreham is ringing so constantly she finds it difficult to eat a breakfast, even a breakfast as simple as Lyla's—coffee and tomato juice. A generous glass of tomato juice and a pot of coffee which she makes after a fashion of her own. She puts milk—not cream—in the bottom of the dripolator and as the coffee drips into it (placed over the lowest flame), it all becomes diffused into the grandest looking, smelling, tasting coffee.

The telephone rang six times in less than half an hour yesterday morning. The date for the wedding has not been set yet, but it will be soon.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring was among those lunching at Pierre's the other day. Fresh from a long drive in from her home, Woodlawn, she was smartly attired in black and white. Her frock was made on simple lines and finished at the neck with a frothy frill of white.

When a new diplomat arrives here for duty almost the first thing he does is buy a car—even before deciding upon a place to live—(the car helps the hunt). When the Rudolf Smits, of the Latvian Legation came, they were no different from the rest—they too, purchased a car. Well, our story has to do with parking—that bugaboo of all motorists.

Down at the State Department there is a special parking space reserved for diplomats. So, Mr. Smits, who is blond, jolly and speaks without a trace of an accent (the last had quite an important part in the incident, went down to the S. D. and parked in the place which he saw was reserved for diplomatic visitors. When he returned from his business inside, he found a gentleman of the law firmly planted beside his car writing out the inevitable ticket. There followed some discussion in which the G. of the L. pointed out the fact that the space was intended for diplomats only—whereupon Mr. Smits not in the least ruffled or annoyed smiled and in turn pointed out that he was "one of them." The policeman listened—could find no foreign accent, then threw down his trump card—"Well, where's your Dpl. license—you've got on dealer's tags?"

All's well that ends well, the fact that the car was brand new explained the tags and each gentleman went his own way.

We being among those who had hoped that the Randolph Bolling Hubards might be returning this way when relieved from their present station at Fort Francis E. Warren, were disappointed to learn that they go next to Fort Sill, where "Bo" will spend his waking hours breaking remounts, making cross-country rides and doing just about everything a student officer finds on his calendar at the Field Artillery School.

Before their wedding in the Naval Academy Chapel last spring—May 2 to be exact—Mrs. H. was Ina Walker Cochran. Everyone at Annapolis — the middies from lowly plebes to "June-piping" First Classmen knew her and the home of her parents, Commander and Mrs. Schamyl Cochran at Southgate, was a general meeting place for all the Navy, young and old.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother Is Greatly Concerned Because Daughter's Fiance Flirts With Other Girls.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a daughter 20 years of age, studying to be a teacher. She is now in her junior year at college. She is desperately in love with a boy of 22 and they are engaged to be married. But when she isn't around he is continually flirting with girls at Sunday school and church. Also, he dates with an old sweetheart of his (now engaged to another man) when my daughter is away. I have been tempted to tell the man she is engaged to. Should I or not?

* * * *

Do you think the man is a suitable person for my daughter to place her faith in? I have tried to talk with her about him, in a reasonable way, and have suggested that she should break the engagement. But she won't do it. She is very sincere in her devotion to him and very faithful, and has not accepted a date with anyone else since they became engaged. Please advise me.

SALLY.

* * * *

DEAR SALLY: I am inclined to agree with you that any young man who continues to "play the field," as the phrase goes, after he is engaged to be married, is not likely to make his fiancee (or his wife) a really happy woman. For such conduct argues inability to sustain a steadfast, single-minded devotion of the sort which keeps marriage a going concern. It argues a lack of inner resources, too.

* * * *

However, it may be your daughter's fiance is nothing worse than an extrovert—a person who is incapable of living within or to himself; who instinctively gravitates toward crowds and individuals; who would consider an evening spent alone a form of medieval torture; who would rather be in the company of the dullest bore than by himself. Your daughter may understand this; she may know that his flirtations and his social engagements with his old sweetheart are essentially harmless; and that if she were always near he would have eyes and thoughts for no one but herself.

* * * *

If there was anything deliberately deceitful, secretive or underhanded in the young man' nature, it is unlikely he would be flirting under his prospective mother-in-law's very nose. It is very probable you are reading undue meaning into the most harmlessly intended gallantries. Haven't you noticed of persons in love that they are usually twice as gracious to everybody they meet as they were before the great experience overtook them? The fact that he goes out with an old sweetheart who is also engaged to someone else might even be regarded as a gesture of good faith toward your daughter. One logically assumes that the girl who is engaged to be married to one man has no serious designs on another. Your daughter's fiance, craving company, may feel he is safer with this girl than he would be with one not engaged; that there is less likelihood his attentions will be misunderstood or misconstrued.

* * * *

The fact that your daughter declines to go out with other men doesn't necessarily impose a similar social sacrifice on her fiance. Perhaps she is more of an introvert than he; more self-sufficient; perhaps she really enjoys her own society. Perhaps this differing, complementary quality in their respective natures is one of the major attractions between them. He may find a sense of security in her self-sufficiency; she may find a sense of release in his gregariousness.

* * * *

In any event, I don't think you will be helping your daughter in the least by meddling in her affairs or carrying tales.

M. H.

Boy-and-Girl Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a boy almost a year. Most of that time we have been going steady, although I don't think we will ever be seriously in love. I enjoy his company and we have many good times together. He knows I consider him a good friend and he accepts me as such. Just recently I met, through him, another boy whom I have seen twice since our first meeting. I liked him better each time. He told me he would like to know me better and I feel the same about him. But the trouble is he knows I'm going steady with the other boy, who is a good friend of his.

* * * *

Can you suggest any way in which I could promote a closer and deeper friendship with the second young man and still not cause trouble? Each time I have seen him he has been with another girl but I know they are not going steady. Please help me.

MISSIE.

* * * *

DEAR MISSIE: The only way to promote a closer and deeper friendship with the new acquaintance, without offending your long-time boy friend, is by arranging foursome parties in which both would be included. You might have an informal Sunday evening supper party for four persons; or have four in for bridge some evening; or get up a foursome for dinner and dancing, and thus gradually develop an all-around feeling of happy fellowship. If the other man is romantically interested in you, and you in him, and it is evident to all who know you well that the first boy is only a good friend and nothing more, the newcomer might in time muster courage to cut in and take his chances.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

Pattern 270.

LET A BIT of crisp ruffling trim the floating capelets and handy patch pockets of this, your dainty wash frock, if you'd brighten up your "at home" wardrobe. Even a "beginner" will find Pattern 270 a delight to make, for, cut from but a few pattern pieces, it's fascinating fun to stitch the simple seams and add the gay "finishing" touches! Yoke and capes are all in one, while well-placed waist-line darts assure a smooth "fit." If you like your frocks trim 'n' tailored, omit the frill—but be sure to choose gayest of novelty buttons for pocket, belt and yoke. A joy to behold in dotted percale, calico, chambray or dimity. Detailed sewing guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 270 is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards 36-inch fabric and 2¾ yards ruffing.

Skirts 'Creeping Up.'

Miami, Fla.—No matter what tricks of glamour they may be prepared to perpetrate, evening frocks are on the up and up this spring.

Many of the smartest of the new styles, which are frothing about the dance floors at the fashionable Florida Year-Round Clubs, Miami, are ankle length and some even climb an inch or two above the ankles.

The Greek Influence.

Improve Your Figure

YOU'LL FEEL like a butterfly coming out of its cocoon as you shed those extra pounds.

Younger, lovelier, gayer, simply from trimming your calories to 1,200 a day until you've reached your ideal weight; and from including in that low-calory diet enough protective foods — milk, leafy vegetables, fruits, eggs, butter. They leave eyes sparkling, hair glossy, cheeks firm and rosy, teeth sound, at the end of your reducing campaign.

Reducing by calory count is as simple as this: buying pop-corn, 100 calories, instead of chocolate bar, 400 calories. Or choosing lemon ice, 100 calories, not fudge sundae, 396, for that drug store treat. Or ordering spring salad—lettuce, watercress, onion, with spiced vinegar,— 25 calories, rather than banana nut salad, 300.

Better yet, forego snacks and eat 3 substantial, but low-calory, meals a day. An expert dietitian has planned two weeks of 1,200-calories-a-day menus with "staying power." That is, foods that digest slowly, fill you from one meal to the next.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Navy Bolero or Bouquet for Easter Dress

House Linens for Bride-to-Be Should Be Selected on Budget Plan.

By Margaret Wallace.

TROUSSEAU problems for the spring bride include the selection of household linen. One bride-to-be has written for advice as follows:

"I am going to marry a man who has a very nice home. My aunt is willing to give me linen and other furnishings in order that I will be able to do my part. I understand the bride is expected to provide linen and other supplies. My aunt is not a very wealthy woman so I do not want her to go to too much expense. Will you please tell just what I would be expected to provide for a household with two servants and three bedrooms?"

Since this girl has no "hope chest" such as the "old-fashioned girl" always provided, she should make a careful list of articles needed, and also make some kind a budget. She should then confer with her aunt. Articles that her aunt finds too expensive or that she cannot afford to provide should be eliminated from the list. If the bride cannot provide these articles herself then it is proper to include them in the general budget of furnishing the house which, of course, is the bridegroom's concern. Linen for the table must necessarily be linen with the exception of the very good-looking cotton lace cloths that are considered good taste.

Well Chosen Articles.

It is not necessary to provide ornate or extremely expensive articles, but the bride who takes pride in her linen closet would prefer a few well-chosen articles in good taste than a store of less expensive, less tasteful ones.

Linen sheets and pillow cases are regarded as something of a luxury today and many of the most tastefully appointed linen closets are stored with sheets and pillowcases of good quality muslin, percale or cambric. There are also many very attractive towels to be had that are not linen or all linen.

A recent bride made out the following list which could be elaborated or cut down to suit the needs and the pocketbook.

Recent Bride's List.

One dozen bath towels, one dozen hand towels, one dozen guest towels, three bath mats, one dozen wash cloths, one large dinner tablecloth, two medium-sized tablecloths, one dozen large dinner napkins, two dozen napkins, two breakfast sets, two luncheon sets, linen runners, lace runner, cotton lace tablecloth, one dozen small napkins, four tray cloths, silencing cloth, mats for hot dishes.

Kitchen—one dozen glass towels, two dozen dish towels, one dozen dish cloths, six pot holders, two ironing sheets, cleaning cloths and dust cloths.

Bedrooms—(Each bed) three pairs of sheets, one pair of blankets, one quilt, three pairs of pillowcases, elderdown comforter, mattress cover two counterpanes.

QUERY—I have been shopping for a gift for a friend who is to be married. My husband and I intend to give her a joint present. She especially wants four linen sheets and pillowcases and I have found some I can afford to buy. Do you think it would be proper to give her these as it is a joint gift in which my husband has a part? The bride is a very intimate friend and was our maid of honor when we were married. We feel like members of her family.

ANSWER—Under the circumstances it would be perfectly proper to give the bride the linen sheets and pillowcases she wishes even though your husband is a joint giver. Usually it is only proper for the family to make such gifts, but since your relationship is almost a family one common sense puts the gift on a family basis.

Prints Are Still Major News For Spring Dress Fashions

Both Paris and New York Are Sponsors; Hats and Accessories Are Being Designed Especially to Complement Them.

The problem of how to choose Easter clothes that will insure chic throughout the season is being discussed in a series of articles by The Post's fashion editor who recently studied spring styles at their sources, the New York merchandise markets and fashion openings. Today she discusses spring dresses.

By Ethel Ehlen,

THE TYPE of frock to accompany your new Easter coat, of course, depends upon the coat you have selected. Color, styling and material of the dress should be determined by whether the coat is tailored or of the dress-up style.

Prints are still fashion news, sponsored by both Paris and New York; in fact, they are considered so important in spring styles that hats and accessories are being designed especially to complement them. The newest prints are spaced so cleverly that a woman of any stature or weight may wear them. Prints of two colors (light on dark grounds), vari-colored ones those in which the flower design is appliqued on the material, those with large and small figures, conservative or bold design—all are correct this spring.

It is a smart idea to ensemble your own redingote costume by choosing a print that is distinctive and topping it with one of the new redingote coats. In the spring color range gray is ultra-smart—all hues and tints, from pale silver tones through the deep smoke and Oxford. Style authorities are advocating gray monotone costumes as a distinctive spring color theme; or several tones of gray in one ensemble. Navy blue and black share honors equally for persons who prefer dark colors; these are usually contrasted with white or color, for instance, gray, beige, lime-green-fuchsia pink, St. James rose.

Dots and Stripes Popular.

Dots and stripes are everywhere, both as a contrast note and in entire costumes. Large, small, spaced and flock dots and buttons in lieu of dots for the pattern have pervaded the latest collections. The same applies to stripes. There are conservative stripes and splashy Roman stripes in brilliant colors. Both dots and stripes are ideal for the frock that is the basis of a redingote costume; they are also effective as a medium for the popular jacketed frocks of silk crepe.

Analyzing daytime frocks, the following outstanding features should be kept in mind when buying a new model: Lowered necklines, shorter skirts, fitted waistline and hipline, short sleeves, glove stitching, complicated seamings, buttons, simplicity in silhouette, effective color contrasts, flared hemlines, boleros, shoulder detail, lingerie touches, novel pockets. There are numerous variations on these popular themes, such as straight-line silhouettes, simple shoulder lines, embroidery in various interpretations.

Silk Crepes Appear.

Both sheer woolens and silk crepes appear in the pre-Easter array of daytime clothes; a combination of the two is also a smart idea. New textures, as well as new patterns and color tones mark the fabrics as definitely spring 1937. Jacketed frocks are a season's must, sheer wool or silk crepe topping crepe frocks of simple lines. The same applies to the sheer wool frock—the majority of these are equipped with jackets of some sort; basque-like affairs, boleros, Etons, or boxy versions. The smartest jackets in this classification repeat the color of the frock.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Many of the functional disorders which affect children exist largely in the minds of their parents. In dealing with adults' diseases, the physician is always conscious of the necessity of making the decision as to whether the symptoms are organic or functional. Most of the functional diseases are nervous. Children are not naturally nervous until driven so by their parents. But in the case of children, a third kind of consideration enters—which is how much the parents' apprehension has to do with the trouble.

It is well illustrated in a case related to me the other day by an harassed pediatrician. One of his patients, a little girl of 10, was reported to be tired all the time. This, of course, is the opposite of natural in children, but nothing could be found to account for it. The little girl was somewhat underweight, but all tests to determine the cause of the fatigue were negative.

The mother couldn't understand it, because she said the child didn't do anything unusual and yet she was always tired and disinclined to play.

So the doctor decided to take his little patient out for an automobile ride, away from maternal influences. And on asking a few questions, these were the replies he got.

Questions and Answers.

How many times a week do you go to the movies? Two, sometimes three.

Daytime or evening? Both.

Ever go both to matinee and an evening movie the same day? Yes, sometimes.

What time do you eat breakfast? About 7:30.

How long do you take to it? Five minutes, sometimes ten. Depends on whether anybody eats with me.

What do you usually have for breakfast? Oh, well, if somebody gets up and cooks it, oatmeal or eggs, but otherwise what's left over. I like canned goods for breakfast.

Do you walk to school? No, papa usually drives me in his car.

Don't you think it would do you good to walk on a nice morning? Oh, maybe. But I'm too tired to walk much.

What do you play after school? Well, the days I don't have a music lesson—

How often do you have a music lesson? Two afternoons a week.

I suppose you sleep late Saturday morning? No, that's dancing school.

Then Sunday morning? No, that is Sunday school.

What time do you go to bed? No regular time.

No regular time, eh? No, if there's a poker game, they let me stay up and kibitz.

Then when Ben Bernie is on the radio, I stay up for him.

Eh! Well, how—

You stay up for Ben Bernie? Yes, and Rudy Vallee. I'm crazy about Rudy Vallee. Say let's stop and get an ice cream soda.

Don't you think it will spoil your supper? Oh, no! I never eat much supper, anyway. I'd rather have the ice cream soda.

Is that exaggerated? It's more common than you suppose. It's easy to see why the child is fatigued. She just has too many assaults on her nervous system.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

NEW YORK, March 19.

THE COURSE on marriage relations seems to be going like a breeze at dear old Vassar, up at Poughkeepsie on the Hudson, and it looks as though the eight-lecture course will become a fixture.

ALICE HUGHES.

Over half the ivy-clad students, who number 1,050, heard the first half of the series, which is given in a hall seating only 400 gells. The talks range in matter from such technical aspects of "boy meets girl" as "The Anatomy and Physiology of Sex" to "Courtship and Choosing a Husband." The latter, which still seems to be a matter of vital import even on the campus, was so popular that it had to be repeated for a second capacity audience.

Think what an unholy rumpus the mere suggestion of such a course at a woman's college would have caused 30 years ago! Outraged parents would have yanked their little girls home overnight, and by the end of the week nobody would be left in the place but the president and the janitor. Now educators all over the land watch the Vassar experiment with interest, and such courses undoubtedly will be one day offered to college girls from coast to coast.

A charge is leveled that the dissemination of such information and knowledge destroys "the romantic conception of marriage." To which I answer, in my shy way, "balderdash!"

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our White Russian colony toils all day and has parties all night. Any excuse for a jamboree will do. They celebrated the 100th anniversary of the death of their national poet, Pushkin, and a couple of weeks later, right smack in the middle of Lent, hailed the approach of spring by pouring champagne and wafting confetti at Vince Astor's St. Regis Hotel. Prince Serge Oblensky seems to lead all these revels. He's handsome, single and charming. Of course, they haven't the Grand Duchess Marie's hand to to kiss—she's in India. But the exiles carry ON! . . .

* * * *

The candid-camera craze has driven a lot of Broadway stars quite daffy—it nearly gave Johnny Gielgud the vapors while he was showing us his "Hamlet." Often I see the first three rows at a hit show packed with fiends snapping away at the actors. Several stars are now considering banning the small-camera addicts from their performances. The nerve strain is said to be awful . . . Note on our times—corset experts tell me that orders for their various types of goods are up a third over a year ago. They look for no price increases, however, at least for a while. . . .

* * * *

Noll Coward's physical breakdown, which causes him to close his one-act plays weeks ahead of time, broke the hearts of thousands of the town's ladies. Several hundred of them turned up for a matinee, only to get their money back, with regrets. The box-office, I hear, had to return over $30,000 in advance cash, and that's not broccoli! . . .

* * * *

Daughter, hand me my shawl! I am struck senile as I read that "Fifi" Widener, who has now had three husbands, will present a debutante daughter next season! Remember when the Philadelphia madcap was the beau ideal of the "flaming youth"—Scott Fitzgerald-Colleen Moore-Clara Bow era in the earliest twenties? My gosh! . . .

* * * *

We do try to run Hollywood a close race for goofy-party honors, in our small way. For instance, you should have seen the midnight skating party at Jack Rockfeller's Radio City outdoor rink not long ago—a mingling of the upper-theatrical mob and that Park Avenue set! What gayety—what bumps! Neysa McMein, the artist and one of the hostesses, wrapped in costly mink, was a lovely sight as she fell on her sitzplatz every few minutes. Others who "skated," or fell down gracefully, were Clifton Webb, Auntie Bea Lillie, Ilka Chase, Gladys Cooper, Philip Merivale and Ona Munson. The modernistic bar, which adjoins the ice, proved to be the most popular spot of all, however—and many of Broadway's best and dearest talked and drank some mighty fine skating in there! Outside of a few avocados, what has Hollywood got that we haven't?

Sportswear Salons In New York Show Satin Bathing Suits

New York (AP).—What the well-dressed woman will wear next summer at the beach is the topic in Manhattan sportswear salons that work far in advance of each season. To fur-wrapped buyers, they are showing bathing suits of gleaming black cire satin, long cotton coats and head 'kerchiefs in bold geometrical prints, flowered pique evening gowns for outdoor dancing, and huge straw beach hats.

One new beach hat has a wide brim of composition that looks like clouded glass, and is top-less except for a wisp of fish net.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

IT'S NO TRICK at all to tell somebody else how to build a fire. In fact, even the most feminine lady can shine at that kind of boy-scouting, and a fire does add a flattering glow for her to be seen in, not to mention the delightful spot of color it gives to a pleasant room.

Last Sunday we had tea with a couple we like a lot. They live out from town a way in an old house they've restored and we did enjoy their open fires. Clare has done an interesting job of decorating the living room, and the dancing firelight makes just the right accent. The walls are papered in a plain cocoa colored paper and the ceiling, book cases and woodwork are cream. The draperies are brown with horizontal pin stripes in yellows and creams, and she's dispensed with glass curtains because of the nice country views from their wide windows. A beige and cocoa toned rug, a brown sofa, several beige chairs and one in dark red leather achieve a feeling of tranquillity and a certain masculinity that does with her tweedy husband and their red setter dog. The furniture is partly eighteenth century English and partly modern—an amiable combination if it's done just right.

Pottery in turquoise blue gives the ensemble its color complement, highlighting the brown effectively. And then there was the firelight in the late afternoon, and Clare's lovely little white and gold tea cups. And Clare herself wearing a flame-colored dress to frame her brown eyes.

Altogether, it was an afternoon entirely to our taste—a pretty room, good friends and China tea in china cups.

Onion Soups Are Delight Of Gourmets

These Concoctions Reach Highest Development in France.

Easy to Make and Add Zest to Any Meal.

By Rebekah Blake.

A SUCCESSFUL dinner hostess might well have soup as her theme song. For all great dinners, to be properly appreciated, must begin with a savory soup. Even the simplest of suppers can be transformed by its steaming goodness.

Soup has a homey, hospitable appeal. A good soup served as a first course, sets the tone for the entire meal. It also has the agreeable virtue of performing often as a whole luncheon in itself or may be used as a main-stay in a buffet supper.

The art of making soup has reached what is perhaps its highest perfection in France, where the soup-pot is almost a national institution. One type of soup, very popular with connoisseurs the world over, is onion soup of Gallic origin. The bowl of onion soup is one of the most delectable of treats—rich, steaming and fragrant. Partisans both for and against the onion in all other guises all meet on common ground as far as onion soup is concerned.

A Perfect Trio.

Of course, the aristocrat of soups, without a generous island of toast and grated cheese, is as unthinkable as a pie without the filling. There is that piquancy in the combination which makes the whole thing a perfect trio—a satisfaction to the gourmet, a delightful surprise to those persons, if there be such, who have never tasted onion soup in the true French manner. The type of cheese which will supply just the correct flavor accent to onion soup is a matter of taste. The familiar, well-cured American cheese, in grated dehydrated form is perhaps the choice most favored by American appetites.

Some soups made a more spectacular entrance on the dinner table in large tureens from which the hostess serves each guest. But onion soup is a sternly individual affair. It should always be served in small individual soup bowls—each bowlful wearing its cheese ring done to a turn. So very special and dramatic an affair is the service of onion soup that there are even special kinds of soup bowls for it. Earthenware bowls—rustic in character and capacious as to depth are ideal for the service of this soup.

Onion Soup.

Cut 3 medium onions in thin slices and cook until soft in 2 tablespoons butter or fat from stock. Add 4 cups soup stock or 4 cups water with 3 bouillon cubes. Season to taste and bring to boiling point. Serve with cheese rings.

Cream of Onion Soup.

4 medium sized onions
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups milk
2 cups special white sauce

Cut the onions in thin slices; cover and cook slowly in butter in the top part of a double boiler over low heat until the onions are yellow, or about five minutes. Add the milk; cook over boiling water one-half hour; rub through a sieve. Add the pulp and the liquid to the white sauce; reheat and season.

Special White Sauce for Cream Soups.

2 to 3 tablespoons butter
½ to 2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt

Pepper, celery salt (or other seasoning) to taste

Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler. Add the flour and blend in with the butter. Gradually add the milk and seasoning and stir until a smooth sauce is made.

Cheese Rings.

Bread
Grated Dehydrated American cheese
Onion soup.

Slice the bread three-eighths of an inch thick; cut it in rounds with a small biscuit cutter. Toast them on both sides, spread with melted butter, then cover generously with grated cheese. Place one of these cheese rings on each serving of onion soup.

Foreign Actress Reveals Secret of Distinctive Garb

If someone seeing you for the first time exclaims, "What a beautiful dress!" you may well feel that your costume is a failure. But if the comment is "What an attractive woman!" then you may know that you have chosen a gown that is truly a part of your personality.

That is the way Lady Abdy, actress and Continental style leader, explains the secret of distinctive dress. In a recent interview, Lady Abdy, tall, blonde, Russian wife of an English nobleman, declared the wearer should dominate her clothes.

"Clothes cannot be a masquerade for a mediocre personality, nor submerge a brilliant one," she said. "Clothes should be appropriate, not conspicuous, and chosen in the few colors that become each woman. Then the quicker one forgets them the better."

ARTICHOKE PUREE.

Wash and pare 1 pound American artichokes and slice into cold water. Add juice of ½ lemon and let stand 15 minutes, then drain. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, add artichokes and 1 slice onion and cook 5 minutes without browning. Add 1 cup cold water and 1 blade mace and cook until tender, then rub through a pursee sieve. Reheat, add 2 cups scalded milk, 1 teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Serve soup in cups and garnish with ½ cup whipped cream mixed with 2 tablespoons nut meats chopped fine and sprinkled with paprika.

To keep fudge icing smooth and creamy just cook to the soft ball stage and allow to cool until lukewarm. Then beat to the spreading stage, adding small amounts of evaporated milk as needed. This keeps the frosting at the proper spreading stage when the cake is being iced.

Post Is Giving 5 Prizes for Candy Recipes

DID YOU give up candy for Lent?

If you didn't, some of your friends did and now that this season of fasting is drawing to a close, entertaining will start again and candy making will be in order.

Do you know of a candy recipe that may be deserving of a cash prize? If so, enter it in The Post weekly recipe contest. The prizes for this contest are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

You may have in mind a recipe for chocolate fudge, fondant, gum drops, peanut brittle, marshmallows, chocolate creams or lollypops. Or you may prefer date and nut sticks, peppermint stick candy or molasses taffy.

Type or write your recipe neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, so she will receive it not later than Saturday noon. Be sure to include your name and address with your recipe.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

The next time you serve oatmeal for breakfast plan to make a little extra. Then pack the left-over cereal in buttered baking powder cans. Place in ice refrigerator, where it will stay fresh until needed. Then, when ready to use, unmold, slice and fry in butter. Serve with maple syrup.

Rinse Milk Bottles First in Warm Water

Rinse empty milk bottles in lukewarm water before washing in hot soapy water; rinse frying pans in scalding hot water to remove as much fat as possible before washing. Dishwashing is much easier when a ready supply of hot water is always available. The automatic electric water heater is one of the most modern methods of insuring an unfailing supply of hot water.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If when you are making mayonnaise, your mixture curdles, simply add 1 or 2 tablespoons of undiluted evaporated milk, beat and all will be well.

By turning partly-used jars of peanut butter, syrup, mayonnaise and so forth upside down, their contents will stay fresh longer. The lids, of course, must be screwed on tightly.

To prevent eggs from splattering while using an egg beater, cut a piece of wax paper just the size necessary to cover the bowl being used. Then slit the paper and pass the beater through it.

Justices Averse To Testifying Before Senate

Committee Asks Report on Docket; Black, Borah Exchange Blasts.

sal by Senator Black of cases in which he said States had been unable to make laws for their own citizens because of varying court interpretations of the Constitution.

Borah Urges Amendment.

The Idahoan spoke in support of his constitutional amendment substitute for the President's court plan, revising the fourteenth amendment with a view to turning back to the States power to enact State social welfare legislation.

Borah said the fourteenth amendment, approved following the Civil War, "was grounded in distrust of the capacity of the people of the respective States to attend to their own business."

"In my opinion," Borah said, "it is impossible to execute the fourteenth amendment under the due process clause without calling into action the economic views to a certain extent of the members of the court. * * *

"What is due process of law? It has never been defined; it cannot be defined; it has no definition which guides the Legislature or the court. Due process of law is gathered from a world of precedents coming down through history to be applied to a particular case that comes before the court. I say that is an impossible duty to impose upon a court. It should never have been imposed upon it."

By limiting "due process" to a purely procedural meaning, Borah said the people by amendment could "turn back to the States the complete power to govern their internal and local affairs."

Citing Supreme Court invalidation of the New York minimum wage law, which "should have been permitted to stand," the Idahoan said he could not "in candor and honor" say the court was to blame.

Needs Correction.

"I do not see how the court could help do other than it has done when the wording of the fourteenth amendment is considered. * * *

"It can be corrected and ought to be corrected. It ought not to be left for a court of nine men or a court of 15 men to guess about. It ought not to be left there for a matter of controversy at all. I say there is no one so competent to pass upon these things as the State itself, and if we do not believe in that we do not believe in self-government."

Leading up to the Borah speech, Senator Black had traced differences in labor rulings of the court on similar issues. He pointed out that a majority held in the Utah eight-hour-day case in 1898 that there was a direct connection between hours of work and health of workers; that a majority had held the reverse in a New York baking case in 1904, and that a majority had held there was a connection in the Oregon 10-hour case in 1916.

"Same Constitution."

"The same written Constitution was in existence in 1898 and 1904 and 1916," Black said. "The Constitution did not change. The judges changed."

When Black added, sarcastically: "Woe be unto the man who questions the infallibility of that ruling that the climate is less healthful in Oregon than in New York." Robinson interrupted with: "Any one who questions that is not a good sportsman."

"Yes," Black agreed, "He's not a good sportsman. He can't trust the umpire."

Across the street, in the Senate caucus room, Prof. Haines was telling the Judiciary Committee that when the Supreme Court "misdirects the public policies" through exercise of political powers, it should be subject to control by the President and Congress.

Calls Plan "Reasonable."

Haines said the President's court plan is "the most reasonable, direct and effective way to aid in changing not the Constitution, but the judicial gloss which stands in the way of the development of a progressive and living law."

He was rigorously cross-examined by Senators Burke, of Nebraska; Connally, of Texas, and other Democratic opponents of the court plan. Burke brought out that Haines formerly had advocated a Constitutional convention to make "10 or 12" changes in the Constitution, curbing the court's power of judicial review and giving Congress a freer hand.

Haines insisted he held with Madison that the court should have the right of review, but on political questions its findings should not be binding on the President and Congress.

Senator Connally grew exasperated when Democratic friends of the bill came to the defense of the witness.

"I refuse to participate in this committee if I am to be hamstrung and dictated to by other Seantors," the Texan hotly protested.

Displays Pocketbook.

When Haines said he would give the court final say on questions arising under the Bill of Rights, Connally countered that "life, property and liberty are involved in every case before the court."

Flourishing his pocketbook, as a symbol of property, Connally asked: "How can you distinguish between a personal right and a property right? It just can't be done."

Lewis said he agreed "with all the recommendations of the President" but his chief argument for it was the solution it offered to "the relation of age to judicial capacity." He said he did not favor a rigid age limit, and believed the proposal to add new justices when incumbents reach 70 would permanently meet the issue.

When Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, brought out that the bill before the committee permanently fixed the court to the limit of justices added, Lewis said he had not read the bill but had read the President's message. He said he was not prepared to testify on the wisdom of any "variations" provided in the bill.

2,000 Infected Inmates Freed From D.C. Workhouse in '36

Health Officials Unable to Cope With Disease at Occoquan Due to Short Terms Served by All Prisoners.

By Gerald G. Gross.

(This article is one in a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia.)

In presenting yesterday a brief outline of the straitjacketed disease control program in the District's penal institutions, several salient points were lost somewhere between the typewriter and the printed page.

One was this: Last year the turnover at Occoquan Workhouse, one-fourth of whose population is syphilitic, was more than 8,200 men and women. This means that some 2,000 pox-infected individuals were turned back into society from this one institution alone.

Since no prisoner remains at the workhouse longer than one year, and an effective syphilis treatment regimen takes at least 15 months, it may be presumed that few if any of the individuals who entered with the disease left the institution cured.

The responsibility for keeping these short-termers—drunks, petty thieves, traffic law violators and so on—under treatment following their release rests with a handful of social workers and nurses in the Health Department who have more sleuthing than they can do to keep their thousands of law-abiding charges coming regularly to the I street clinic.

25% at Lorton Infected.

As at Occoquan, one-fourth of the Lorton Reformatory population has spirochete trouble. Since Lortonites, felons all, are in for more than a year, the problem of treatment continuity is simpler. Right now 400 out of the 1,500-odd inmates are getting "shots" regularly, exclusive of those being taken care of for gonorrhea.

When it was stated here yesterday that District Jail was doing "practically nothing" about its serious venereal disease problem, the lack of an explanation left the inference of negligence on the part of the lockup's administration. Such is not the case.

Due principally to the inadequacy of medical personnel and housing facilities, routine blood tests are made only on those charged with prostitution and other sex offenses. These constitute a small percentage of the jail's average daily population of 600.

When there is a refusal to submit to a Wassermann, none is made. Nor is anything done about prisoners known to be infected but who stubbornly spurn treatment, save that they may be placed in isolation to safeguard others.

Insufficient funds for medical service, housing congestion that is general throughout the antiquated bailey, the brief residence of most of the prisoners and the fact that no attempt is made to enforce that section of the venereal disease law which authorizes the health officer to deal with recalcitrant syphilitics combine to form a disheartening situation at the jail.

Survey Report Quoted.

Regarding the latter point, the 1936 report on the survey conducted by the American Social Hygiene Association said:

"Mention was made at the jail of a doubt that examination and treatment could be carried out in prisoners unwilling to co-operate. This would be a most extraordinary situation indeed since many modern penal institutions carry out such procedures as a matter of course."

Ironically, venereal disease surveys in the District have been fairly abundant in the last ten years. There was the comprehensive Preble report of 1927, the health and hospital study of 1929, the Clark-Exner survey of 1936, whose recommendations in part have already been mentioned and numerous others of a less ambitious nature.

Thousands of dollars in public and private funds have been spent on this type of research, resulting in large quantities of sound recommendations, but no remedial action worthy of mention.

Meanwhile, health conditions in Washington's penal institutions, as well as the city itself, have gone from bad to worse. One out of every four prisoners is suffering from syphilis. More cases and more deaths are being reported to the Health Department than ever before.

Citizenry Aroused.

There are definite indications that not only the citizens of Washington, but also those members of Congress who have the most to do with the municipal public health appropriations are becoming aroused to the omnipresent peril of venereal infection.

"Nothing is more important than this crusade against social diseases in the Capital," Representative Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, told the investigator. "I'm mighty glad to see a newspaper render a real service to the community by stripping the veil from a subject which has been a mystery altogether too long.

"I am decidedly in favor of granting adequate appropriations to cope with the problem."

It taxes the memory to recall the last time a member of the House Appropriations sub-committee on the District made such a positive statement in favor of equitable funds to combat syphilis and gonorrhea.

Walsh Assails Plan to Increase Supreme Court

Georgetown U. Official Calls It 'Indirect' Impeachment.

The Rev. Edmund J. Walsh last night termed the President's court proposal "indirect impeachment" as he spoke at Constitution Hall, continuing his lecture course on "The Constitution and the Supreme Court."

The vice president of Georgetown University said:

"Article III, Section 1, of the Constitution clearly appoints Supreme Court justices for life under the accepted phrase, 'during good behavior.' They can not legally be removed by Congress, by the Executive or the electorate, except through impeachment, on a bill of specifications, originating in the House and tried in the Senate.

"What is now proposed is to eliminate certain designated justices by the device of indirect impeachment achieved by public denunciation, by radio, by contumelious innuendo, and by accumulative indictment of their judicial integrity and psychological inability to render equal justice under law to the American people.

"The results of this dangerous adventure are increasingly apparent in the growing contempt for courts now manifesting itself in many sections of the country. The laws of the land are being openly defied and repeated challenge to the sovereignty of government is being hurled from illegally occupied premises. In one instance an organized group paraded outside a court room and frankly asserted its purpose of intimidating a judge in the performance of his duty.

"He is an amateur psychologist and a naive statesman, be he Democrat or Republican, who could have hoped for some miraculous stoppage of the floods of human passion once fundamental respect for the judiciary was attacked in high quarters by prominent Government officials whose motives may have been meritorious but whose language and methods have proved highly inflammatory. It is a fearful responsibility he assumes who knowingly or unknowingly breaches the dike of law and order by weakening respect for the integrity of its appointed custodians.

"As the human conscience is the keeper of individual morality, so law is the sovereign tribunal of the body politic. If the interpreters of the law have developed a false conscience, they should be corrected and educated, not ridiculed or liquidated. For that infection will spread until it attacks the very principle of constituted authority and reaches both Legislature and the Chief Executive."

D. C. Doctors Attend Preview Of Drive Movie

Film About Tuberculosis Shown to Educators, Group Officers.

Doctors, educators and officers of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association yesterday saw the first local preview of "Behind the Shadows," talking picture which will be used for public education during the tenth annual "Early Diagnosis Campaign" in April and May.

Efforts to suppress information regarding the activities of the 29-year-old actress and newspaper woman followed linking of her name to the former premier, who remains prominent in French political affairs.

The 62-year-old Count de Chambrun is recovering from a bullet wound in the thigh after being shot by Mme. Fontanges in the Nord railway station Wednesday.

Reports from the Palais de Justice said the examination magistrate hesitated more than an hour before searching Mme. Fontanges' luxurious flat, fearing the police would find papers compromising the French statesman.

The woman's diary of "confessions" contained repeated references to Mussolini, with whom she obtained two exclusive interviews while she was Rome correspondent for the newspaper Liberte.

One entry described a secret rendezvous at the palace, although it appeared Mussolini never telephoned or wrote to her directly but arranged their meetings through an intermediary, police said.

One passage in the diary, covering events in her life between last April to November, said of Mussolini:

"Today he said, 'Abyssinia no longer means anything to me now—I have only the sweet memories of this unforgettable hour.'"

Police said she frequently used an intimate abbreviation for Mussolini's name.

Mme. Fontanges, who first told police she shot De Chambrun because he violated her confidences and caused her to lose the love of a man "too famous to be mentioned by name," told newspaper men in her tiny cell at the Petite Roquette prison that:

Work Completed On 1938 Budget

The measure will not be reported to the House until week after next, Majority Leader Rayburn stated. It had been previously scheduled for next Thursday.

While committee members maintained the customary silence about the bill's contents, all indications are that the $47,500,000 total recommended by the Budget Bureau has not been changed greatly except in intra-departmental transfers.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

By Bob Burns.

There ain't much sincerity about people who open their eyes and rave about every little thing you show 'em, but sometimes they are good company for a change.

I remember my Aunt Sophie Ledbetter used to git so discouraged with my Uncle Hink because he never showed any surprise at anything.

Aunt Sophie had jest about given up hopes of ever seein' him surprised when one day she learned that a magician was appearin' that night at Kings Opera House. She went to the show and took Uncle Hink.

First, the magician pulled some gold pieces out of Uncle Hink's ear.

Finally, as a big climax to his act, the magician pulled three white rabbits out of Uncle Hink's beard. When Uncle Hink came back to his seat, my Aunt Sophie, she turned to him and says, "Well, don't tell me that that didn't surprise you!"

My Uncle Hink says, "No, I didn't like to say nothin' about it, but I been sort a suspectin' them rabbits was there for some time."

Heavy Money Man.

It may interest the Treasury Department to know that someone in this broad land likes, favors, those big and round silver dollars over the handier paper currency. He is a blonde, movie-actor-faced young man named James Barker Smith, who came here yesterday from Colorado Springs, Colo . . . He walked to a hotel desk and settled up, in advance, with silver dollars . . . He walked in a cocktail bar, lingered a moment, and settled up with silver dollars . . . Then, to an inquiry, he pulled from a coat pocket a chamois skin bag heavy with silver dollars . . .

"I'm travelling in the interest of a hotel I manage in Colorado Springs," he said with Rocky Mountain air briskness . . . "And I like to advertise, too, my State's leading minerals, silver, for example," he said . . . He didn't especially think there was anything curious about carrying around heavy metal when light and equally potent paper fits better in the pockets . . . But even the Treasury people, we suspect, will regard it as one of the most curious phenomenas among all the flora and fauna of the Republic.

Questionnaire.

I. C. C. Motor Carriers Lodge, No. 349, A. F. G. E., develops a zippy way of attracting attention to its activities and perchance a few additional members to its roster. It submits a questionnaire, reading in parts, as follows:

"Question: What group obtained 26 days annual leave in lieu of 15 days imposed by the Economy Act? Answer, 1, United States Chamber of Commerce; 2, Organized Federal Employes; 3, Anti-Steel Trap League."

"Question: What group persuaded Congress to authorize a study of overtime in Federal offices with a view to correcting the situation? Answers, 1, National Economy League; 2, Mount Vernon Old Ladies Association; 3, Organized Federal Employes."

"Question: What organized group is now working for optional retirement after 30 years in Federal service? Answer, 1, Merchants and Manufacturers Association; 2, American Federation of Government Employes; 3, Amalgamated Aardvark-Hunters' Association."

Dr. S. O. Fladness becomes chief of the Field Inspection Division, Bureau of Animal Industry, succeeding Dr. George W. Pope, retired on February 28 . . . During the last five years Dr. Fladness was assistant chief . . . Since 1906, when he entered the bureau, he has had a wide and varied experience in veterinary and other livestock work . . . Twice he was sent to South America to investigate disease control methods . . . He represented the bureau in Mexico in 1925 and served once as special investigator in connection with the administration of the Packers and Stockyards Act . . . As chief of the inspection division, he will direct the Federal veterinary quarantine service for the exclusion of various foreign livestock diseases.

These are samples . . . The lodge asks Government employes to check off the correct answers with the feeling that organized activity gets a big push thereby.

Led by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center Department, the Community City Council made an inspection tour of the Terrell Junior High School and the Buchanan and Thomson centers.

Headed by J. G. Yaden, the council's membership includes: Henry L. Quinn, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. William C. McNeill, all of the board of education. Members-at-large include Frederic A. Delano, Mark Lansburgh and Col. West A. Hamilton. Activities witnessed by the council included basketball, art classes and various handcrafts.

Capital Gets 1,000 More Relief Jobs

Announcement Comes as District Building Is Picketed.

'Employables' Off Rolls Not Benefited, Says WPA Official.

One thousand additional work relief jobs were established in the District yesterday while pickets representing 342 men who were dismissed from a Bolling Field WPA project paraded around the District Building with placards proclaiming "Labor Must Eat."

Otto J. Cass, deputy WPA administrator for the District, confererd hurriedly with David Dixon, representative of the Workers Alliance, which established the picket line, and promised all the Bolling Field relief workers would be re-employed. The pickets were withdrawn immediately.

"Five minutes before the pickets appeared," said Cass, "I got word that the local WPA quota for security wage employes had been increased from 6,400 to 7,400. We had been working for two months to have this done."

Completed March 12.

Cass pointed out that the project at Bolling Field, supervised by Federal officials and manned with local relief labor, had been completed March 12, but the local WPA did not learn the employes had been dismissed until Monday. Since then, he said, 200 of the dismissed employes have been assigned to other projects. All the men will have jobs by Wednesday, Cass assured Dixon.

Although elated over the increased work relief quota, Cass said he did not believe it would solve the District's relief crisis.

The 3,000 employables who have been denied aid from the District government and the Federal WPA will not benefit from the increased quota, Cass said.

He pointed out that the local WPA already has a waiting list of approximately 1,100 employables who have been certified as being in need by local relief authorities.

3,000 Off Relief Rolls.

The 3,000 employables whose plight has been brought to public attention by the Council of Social Agencies in its fight for an $830,000 supplemental appropriation for direct relief until July 1, have not been able to get on the relief rolls and therefore are not eligible for the new WPA jobs, Cass said.

The increase in the work-relief quota will make it unnecesary to drop men from projects being completed as well as provide additional jobs. Workers who come under the quota receive between $45 and $85 a month. Men who will receive the new jobs have not been getting direct relief funds for several months and have been attempting to maintain their families with gifts of food and clothing from the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation.

Woman on Relief Problem.

For the first time a woman spoke in her own behalf on the "Help Wanted" program over Station WJSV last night. The program is being given by the station in cooperation with the Community Chest and the Board of Public Welfare.

She told a story of a courageous fight against the depression to support herself and her 11-year-old daughter. He husband was killed in a railroad wreck, leaving her destitute when she was little more than a girl bride.

Another person interviewed was the father of three children, the youngest but a month old.

Girl Breaks Md. U. Tradition To Study Animal Husbandry

MARTHA LOUISE COX.

Martha Cox, of Silver Spring, Aspires to Become Horse Breeder; First to Shatter Belief Subject Is Strictly for Men.

Unabashed by the common belief the study of animal husbandry is strictly for men, Martha Louise Cox, 19, of Silver Spring, Md., has decided to major in this course at the University of Maryland, it was revealed yesterday.

Although the only woman in a class of 33 men, Miss Cox intends to complete her studies in this field and enter the business of raising thoroughbred horses after graduation in 1940.

A lover of horses, Miss Cox is a member of the co-ed riding team at the university, one of the best in this section.

Her father, Joseph F. Cox, is senior agronomist at the Department of Agriculture. He was formerly dean of agriculture at Michigan State University.

Martha is the first woman ever to take up animal husbandry at the university. Several years ago, however, a co-ed graduated from the college of engineering, and last fall another girl created a furor when she earned a place in the university band, strictly a masculine organization.

On the other hand, several years ago, there were several men enrolled in courses in the home economics college.

Holy Comforter School, winning team honors, was awarded the championship banner. Judges in the contest were: the Rev. Brothers Luke and Leonard, F. S. C., of the faculty of De La Salle College.

Three Obstacles Confront Youth, Church Unit Told

Though the Christian youth of the world today stands close to the promised land of world brotherhood and peace, three obstacles— atheism, materialism and selfishness—are yet to be overcome, Dr. S. Franklin Mack, secretary to the Young People's League of New York, declared last night.

He spoke at the banquet of the Young People's Presbyterian League held in the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church.

At the end of his talk, Dr. Mack, declaring each young people's unit must embody the spirit of brotherhood, presented the group with a working plan designed to bring about fulfillment of the goal.

New officers are: Lois Judge, Takoma Park Church, president; Maynard Whitney, New York Avenue Church, vice president; Mary White, Garden Memorial Church, secretary; Ruth Burslem, Hyattsville Church, corresponding secretary; Robert Ralston, Western Church, treasurer and Charles Hayward, Eckington Church, financial secretary.

Citizens Oppose Track Removal

The Takoma Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution asking that the street car tracks in their section not be removed until the adequacy of the bus service to be installed May 2, has been proven.

A resolution also was adopted asking a Congressional appropriation to be used in investigating the possibility of a city-wide subway system.

Acting on a letter from the Zoning Commission, the association refused to change its last year's stand opposing the erection of community houses in A-Semi-Restricted areas.

Another resolution was adopted memorializing Dr. Horace W. Whittaker, long a member of the association who died recently.

Unit to Test Pollution of River Asked

Committee Formed and Resolutions Adopted for Basin Study.

Resolutions requesting the President and Congress to co-operate toward abating river pollution and to carry out, specifically, the recommendations of the special advisory committee on water pollution of the National Resources Committee, were adopted here yesterday by a group of State and city officials called to meeting by the Washington Board of Trade.

A chief recommendation looks to the establishment of a demonstration unit on the Potomac River drainage basin—to be known as the Potomac River Conservancy District—which would be used as experiment grounds in anti-pollution work.

Viewing the situation principally from the viewpoints of the District, Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia and frequently terming it "menacing" and "threatening," the meeting yesterday formed an organization, naming it the Potomac Valley Pollution Conference, to be governed temporarily, at least, by an executive committee.

Committee Formed.

This committee will consist of Dr. R. H. Riley, director of health, Maryland; George L. Hall, acting chief engineer, Maryland Department of Health; Morton Wallerstein, chairman, Virginia State Planning Board; Charles E. Ryder, chief engineer, Department Forests and Waters, Pennsylvania; E. S. Tisdale, chief engineer, Division of Sanitary Health, West Virginia Health Department; Thomas W. Koon, mayor, Cumberland, Md.; M. O. Leighton, vice chairman, sub-committee on miscellaneous projects, and a consulting engineer; Dr. I. C. Riggin, Virginia State health commissioner, and W. B. Holton, of American University.

The Special Advisory Committee has recommended that the Federal Government set aside $15,000,000 for pollution experiment in this area. Decision to use the Potomac as a laboratory was made with reason, it was pointed out yesterday. Along the length of the river the number of sewerage and industrial waste problems are typical of practically all modern problems arising elsewhere in the United States.

Would Aid Other Cities.

Government engineers, it was explained, have in the past 25 years collected a vast amount of data on the Potomac situation and "this would permit them to go into the matter armed with all the necessary pertinent facts," the Board of Trade said in its meeting call. The proposed conservancy district would be designed as a training unit for the development of scientific and administrative personnel for duty with other States.

Such a demonstration unit as proposed would serve several purposes, its proponents say. These were declared in the resolution as better co-ordinated water pollution control legislation between the States concerned and between the States and the Federal Government; more adequate administrative procedure by State agencies; a development of the legal and administrative procedures for regional or metropolitan pollution abatement authorities; co-ordination of municipal sewage disposal projects with State-wide or interstate projects; clearing up of unsolved problems of treating industrial wastes; the extension of cooperation with industry and a direction of public interest toward adequate control of water pollution.

The drainage basin is comparatively small and is sufficiently close to the Washington base for consultation purposes, negotiations and review, it was pointed out in stressing that expenditures "could be kept at a sufficiently modest level to warrant the demonstration program."

The State health departments of Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia went on record to co-operate with the Federal Government, with the National Resources Committee and with officials of the Potomac River Conservancy District "in solving the many problems of stream pollution on the Potomac River drainage basin."

The organization, as set up yesterday, consisted of the delegates registered at the meeting and is open to all having an interest in its aims. The organization will meet next at call of the executive committee, then to form a permanent set-up. John A. Remon, chairman, River and Harbor Improvements Committee of the Board of Trade, welcomed the delegates and made introductory remarks.

Senate Group to Draft Bill Raising D. C. Quota of Cadets

Measure Also Planned to Increase Capital's Ratio of Midshipmen; Appointments Would Be Boosted to 21.

Washington youths will have more opportunities to obtain appointments to West Point, and possibly to Annapolis, as a result of action yesterday by the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Upon recommnedation of Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, the committee ordered that a bill be drafted increasing the quota of appointments from Washington to a parity with a State having two Senators and one Representative.

Senator Walsh, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, subsequently stated that he would propose that similar action be taken with regard to the Naval Academy.

If both bills are enacted into law, the District quota to the two institutions will be increased from 9 to 21. Five appointments now are made annually to West Point and four to Annapolis.

The committee also reported favorably on a bill to give Virginia jurisdiction of a part of Military road and a right of way through Fort Myer to permit extension of the Lee boulevard to the Memorial Bridge. A similar bill is pending in the House.

The demand for an increase in the Academy appointments came from a civic delegation led by the Forest Hills Citizens Association. A delegation submitted data to a subcommittee, headed by Senator Reynolds, to show that ten States of smaller population than the District have a larger quota.

2 U. S. Groups To Meet Today On Memorial

Inspection of Design, Site of Jefferson Shrine Already Made.

The two Federal groups charged with guiding the building development of the Capital will meet jointly this morning to discuss proposed plans for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial to be erected in Potomac Park.

As a preliminary to their session with the Fine Arts Commisison, members of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday inspected the area south of the Tidal Basin which has been approved by the memorial group created by Congress.

Since neither the planning nor the arts body has any authority in this particular matter, no objections are expected to be voiced to the location or the John Russell Pope design, which have aroused a storm of controversy. The joint meeting will take up street changes, landscaping, flood control and other matters incidental to the monument project.

At their separate meetings yesterday the planners inspected the Pope drawings and voted to cooperate with the newly appointed public buildings commission which is making study of Federal housing needs in the District.

Approval was given the proposed new zoning law, drafted and submitted by Alfred Bettman, Cincinnati expert, which will be forwarded to the District Commissioners for their action. Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the District Committee, has agreed to introduce the bill.

The commission also voted to offer data which it has gathered on auditoria throughout the country to the Auditorium Commission recently named by Congress to make plans for such a facility in Washington.

A building development plan for the "southwest rectangle" was presented by William T. Partridge, architectural consultant, and taken under consideration.

Laski Calls World 'Lunatic Asylum;' Sees War Threat

New York, March 19 (AP).—The world, as viewed today by Harold Laski, professor of political science at London University, is the "lunatic asylum of the planets."

"We have a 50-50 chance of averting war at the present time," he said, arriving on the United States liner Manhattan to deliver the Bronson Cutting memorial lectures at Washington.

"On the Continent, in Europe, there is a tension and a smell of explosives evident to any visitor," he said. "The situation is very similar to that of 1913.

"The people and the governments do not want war, but war is rooted in the present system. Hitler, and the German government, constitute the greatest single danger to peace. They don't want war, but Hitler and his followers want things they cannot get without war."

2 Squads Raid Gaming Places; Woman Seized

Police Are Hand-Picked to Prevent 'Leaks;' One House Is Empty.

Two hand-picked squads of detectives who were not members of the regular police vice squad yesterday continued the Police Department's war on gambling with simultaneous raids on two alleged gaming establishments.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, leader of one of the raiding parties, said that the personnel of the raiding groups was "hand-picked" to eliminate possibility of "leaks" and "tip-offs."

The squad led by Thompson, who is chief of detectives, found no one at an apartment at 1717 R street northwest. They found an alleged bookmaking place with two phone lines connected by a switchboard to eight extension phones, but no operators.

The other raid, on an apartment at 3506 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was led by Lieut. John A. Fowler, who ordinarily is the department's ballistics expert. His squad arrested Miss Mary Agnes Gerardi, 30, who was charged with conspiracy to violate gaming laws, and released on bond of $1,000. She will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage this morning.

Police last night were investigating a report that the Teleflash Corporation, preparatory to leaving the city, was dismantling its showroom and office on the fifth floor of the Second National Bank Building, 1333 G street northwest.

Willard Waitress Assails Union Aide

Actions by Mrs. Mabel Norman, former waitress at the Willard Coffee Shop, disrupted service in the shop, divided the waitresses into cliques and finally caused one girl to resign her job, according to Sally Josephine Mulvey, another waitress at the Willard, in testimony before the National Labor Relations Board yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Norman was shop steward for Local 781, of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Alliance. Her discharge, and that of Garland P. Webb, waiter, contributed toward the recent strike at the Willard.

Miss Mulvey told the board that Mrs. Norman carried reports of activities and copversations of the waitresses back to union headquarters and created an air of suspicion among the girls. At the time, late in January, all 18 waitresses were members of the union.

Hearings in the case are being held by the board on the complaint that Mrs. Norman's testimony in a previous labor board hearing was reason for her discharge. She had testified in the case of Grim, a union waiter discharged on charges of incompetence.

Boys' School Rule by D. C. Again Urged

House Group Renews Request for Transfer After Hearing.

Administration Charged With Irregularities by Stengle.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday renewed its recommendation that the National Training School for Boys be turned over to the District government after listening to charges of irregularities in administration.

The committee suggested that the transfer, already proposed to District officials by the Budget Bureau, should be considered in connection with the general governmental reorganization plan before Congress, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings recommended the change in his testimony.

Charges of gross discrimination and maladministration were placed before a sub-committee during hearings on the Justice Department supply bill by Charles I. Stengle, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Discrimination Charged.

Stengle told the sub-committee that social service students are living at the school and "receiving all the benefits of the institution at the expense and denial of the regular employes."

He also charged that there is gross discrimination in assignment of living quarters and in hours of labor among the employes. Some work as much as 100 hours a week, he said, and some as little as 30 hours.

Stengle also made charges that employes often are forced to contribute to the cost of entertaining guests of the superintendent. He asked for a Congressional investigation.

"Men employes are keeping their families there," Stengle said.

Suites for Some.

Some of them have a suite of rooms, with a private bath, when as many as ten regular employes have the use of single rooms with one bath among them. Some employes are even denied the use of a room."

Claudius B. Jones, superintendent of the school, argued for retention of the institution under the Justice Department. He pointed out that more than half of its inmates come from outside the District now.

The sub-committee rejected a request of the school for three additional positions, but allowed $21,540 for repairs.

Capitol Theater Is Captivated By Wini Shaw

"ESPIONAGE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a play by Walter Hackett, adapted to the screen by Manuel Reif, Leonard Lee and Ainsworth Morgan, featuring Edmund Lowe, Madge Evans, Ketti Gallian and Paul Lukas, with 'Skeets' Gallagher, Frank Reicher, William Gilbert, Robert Graves, Leonid Kinsky, Mitchell Lewis, Charles Trowbridge, Barnett Parker and Russell Hicks. Directed by Kurt Neumann. Reviewed Friday afternoon at Loew's Capitol by Mary Harris.

That "Lady in Red"—she takes the show at the Capitol this week. Wini Shaw doesn't wear red, but her personality flames carmine. Wini is no mere "weinie"—believe us. Her songs are sweeter'n honey and have the impact of an electric drill.

But that only says a part of it. Miss Shaw is that great rarity—a celluloid celebrity who is even better on the stage than on the screen. She not only can sing like a lark, but she gives its best and most humorsome value to every phrase of a lyric. Her songs include a rendering of that "Delightful, Dee-licious, De-lovely," song that makes you feel that you never appreciated it before. Also the tricky "You're Just Too Marvelous" from her last picture. For a final encore, after insistent applause, she gave the famous "Lady In Red." Especially to be commended, too, is Wini's gown. It's a jacket evening affair in white with impressive reveres of mink.

Haslett Also Scores.

Only because Wini is so super-super does Washington's own Talbert Haslett rate the second spot. His two numbers were the tops and the audience demanded more, but didn't get them probably for time reasons. The first was one of those happiness songs that don't appeal to this scribe, but very well done, and then came a stirring rendition of the "Song of the Vagabond."

Stone & Lee, funsters, are a decoration to any man's show. They spring a real laugh every five seconds, at least. Miss Lee nominally "feeds" the jokes but her sharp little mannerisms rate as much enjoyment as her partner's lines.

Billy Wells and the Four Fays, dancing folk with sparring angles, put on a fast and fresh turn. They have speed and smartness and spiffiness. (Gosh, aren't we alliterative.)

Thrill Skating Act.

Helen Renolds and the World Skating Champions are hades on wheels, meaning roller skates. Their ballets are lovely studies in motions and their stunt numbers look too, too dangerous for such pretty-pretties to risk their anatomies in.

This brings us up to "Espionage," the, shall we say, distaff side of the bill, assuming that one is old-fashioned and anti-feministic.

Not that "Espionage" is dull or slow. On the contrary, it is fast-paced and generally amusing. But, too, it is patterned and unsurprising.

But, for all that, it is a cracking good spy story, with Edmund Lowe and Madge Evans, a pair of the smoothest acting people in show business, first matching wits and then matching affections. Paul Lukas is impressive and likable as an munitions magnate who gives up munitioneering, and Ketti Gallian is dee-lovely and the rest of it as his girl friend and bride.

Is Good Spy Yarn.

Boiled down, it amounts to the flat declaration that there's nothing wrong with "Espionage," but the story, and that is well offset by adept direction and good acting. If you like spy stories and hotcha action, the picture is your dish. If spy yarns give you that sinking sensation in the midriff, it's just too bad, but we'll wager you snap out of it atnd get pretty interested after all. And this from an antispy-story reviewer. There is considerable good acting in the minor characterizations with gem-studded stars rated by "Skeets" Gallagher in a semisober role, and Frank Reicher, as the "Man Friday" of the munitions king.

Bert Lahr doubles up the horse players in a short about the entirely accidental art of picking long shots. The newsreel is dignified if not peppified by Will Hays and Jesse Jones.

Palace

"ON THE AVENUE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Gene Markey and William Counselman, with musical score by Irving Berlin and dances staged by Seymour Felix, featuring Dick Powell and Madeleine Carroll, with Alice Faye, the Ritz Brothers, George Barbier, Alan Mowbray, Cora Witherspoon, Walter Catlett, Stepin Fetchit, Sigmund Rumann, Billy Gilbert, E. E. Clive, John Sheehan, Edward Cooper and Paul Gerrits. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Friday afternoon, second week, by Sally Stroud.

Spotted with neat songs which your radio has been purling for weeks, dotted by humor neither too swift nor too smutty, and manned by a fairly capable crew of stars, this bit of meringue is easier to take than any other carbon of "42nd Street" which has appeared for a long time.

Dick Powell is a young leading man of musical comedy who irritates the richest girl in America (this time played by Madeleine Carroll), by a satirical skit in his show, in which she is beautifully ridiculed. The story is all about how they are enemies, then friends, then enemies again, and finally applicants for a marriage license. The Ritz brothers enter and demolish the show. As breaker-uppers they qualify.

Alice Faye, doomed to tote a torch for some man, yearns for ex-choir boy Powell, sings plaintively; she seemed to be more fun than Carroll, who seems to belong to the costume type of film, appearing more glamorous when she isn't called upon to hot-cha in the modern manner.

Good songs, "I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm," "This Year's Kisses," etc; all superlative.

Besides a travelogue in colors, there is a Jefferson Machamer comedy in which he seems to be trying to adopt the Benchley method of producing laughs.

High School Cadet Drill Postponed to March 25

The competitive battalion drill and band contest for high school cadet corps was called off yesterday afternoon because of wet parade grounds at Central High stadium.

The drills were postponed to next Monday afternoon, school officials said. Regimental competition now is scheduled for next Thursday.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Jessie Matthews Sings and Dances Her Way Through Agreeable Film at Earle

'Head Over Heels in Love' Is a Tuneful Romance of Youth.

"HEAD OVER HEELS IN LOVE." Gaumont British picturization of a play by Francois de Croisselt, adapted to the screen by Fred Thompson and Dwight Taylor, starring Jessie Matthews, with Louis Borrell, Robert Flemyng, Romney Brent, Whitney Bourne, Paul Leyssac, Eliot Makeham and Fred Duprez. Directed by Sonnie Hale. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

While this is not the most pretentious vehicle for the threefold talents of its star, it nevertheless, provides Jessie Matthews with an agreeable outlet for her indisputable ability as actress, singer and dancer.

BELL.

The story of "Head Over Heels in Love" follows a familiar formula. It is the well-worn fable of the brilliant young woman who is sought by a philandering promoter, who is promoting himself more than anyone else, and the final discovery that love has been perching on her doorstep for months, in the person of a likable young chap whose talents are less obtrusive, but vastly more genuine, than those of the gay dog who is trying to lure her to Hollywood and a "career."

Scattered through the action of the play are a series of songs by Gordon and Revel, the American composers, that lend the goings-on a needed verve and lilt. Miss Matthews utilizes these numbers, under the adroit direction of her husband, Sonnie Hale—who, this time, does not appear in the picture—to best advantage, although the glittering spectacle that characterized the musical numbers of "It's Love Again" never manifest itself.

Only A Few Chorals.

Only once does Miss Matthews make use of a choral background and then it is a strictly male ensemble aimed more at accentuating the skill of her dancing than any vocal quality of the score. Occasionally there are invisible chorals that lend color and depth to the Gordon and Revel compositions, but this is of infrequent occurrence.

The songs that the American boys have contrived for this release are "May I Have the Next Romance With You," "Looking Around Corners," "There's That Look in Your Eyes Again," "I don't Give a Good Gosh Darn" and "Through the Courtesy of Love." Of these, "Looking Around Corners" is accorded the most novel treatment. By employment of a traveling camera crane, it follows the search of Pierre for the girl he loves through all the nooks and crannies of the town, with Miss Matthews' singing features more often than not superimposed upon his wandering quest. It is an effective bit of dressing for a song number that carries quite a bit of punch in both tune and lyrics.

Miss Matthews, as has already been intimated, is a young artiste of the first rank, whose accomplishments rather outrun those of the common or garden variety of singing comedienne. Her dancing still is such as to inspire the hope that some day she will come to America and make a picture with Fred Astaire, Paul Draper, Charles Collins or some of the other dancing stars of the native cinema.

Two Leading Men.

Two leading men add to the luster of Miss Matthews' work. They are two extremely personable young men, little known to American audiences, by the names of Louis Borrell and Robert Flemyng. These two young fellows are in sharp contrast. Mr. Borrell is of the menacing Latin type and Mr. Flemyng the simple, ingenuous youth into whose thoughts creep no ominous impulses.

The one is suave, sinister and polished; the other, completely on the side of straightforwardness and honest inclinations. The drama of the piece, such as it is, is heightened by the presence of these two in the cast.

The supporting company, although of no great size or distinction, is adequate. Romney Brent, an admirable actor, always may be relied upon for a commendable performance and Whitney Bourne adds one more touch of feminine charm to the cast.

Walton Tops on Stage.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is not such as to set the town on fire. The bill introduced by the trig and cheery Miss Audrey Sieber is opened by James Evans & Co., in feats of upside-down juggling, which involve the usual bureau, bed, Maltese cross and the other expected concomitants of this sort of act. Kirk and Lawrence come next in a nondescript turn that seemed less funny yesterday afternoon than it evidently was intended to be. Bert Walton, a jesting comic, well known to Washington audiences, occupies the next-to-closing spot and manages to salvage his period of foolery on the side of keen entertainment with the aid of a "stooge," who really can sing. The vaudeville portion of the entertainment is closed by Sylvia Manon and company in "Porcelain Romance," an adagio number staged before an elaborate Dresden setting and presented with a background of standard music well sung by two feminine vocalists.

A Grantland Rice "Sportlight," "King Soccer," affording Ted Husing an opportunity to rhapsodize over the wonders of the football game played with such enthusiasm in Buenos Aires; a Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy, "I Only Have Eyes For You," and the Paramount News are the screen supplementaries of a feature that strikes a fair average for Holy Week.

New Theater

"HOME OF THE BRAVE." Comedy skit from the Theater Guild Production, "Parade."

"PROTEST." Drama in one act by Alfred Hayes, Thomas Richardson and Earl Robinson.

From the New Theater Group, Washington has come to expect dramatic productions of unusual content, with many bearing on topics not only eschewed by the professional theater locally but also lending themselves to violent expressions of opinion and performance which a playhouse catering to all sorts and conditions of men could not well afford to offer.

Thursday they came through with another evening of contentious drama with the piece de resistance "Protest," a stark anti-lynch work, with music forming an essential aspect of the drama.

As a preachment, "Protest" may be good advocacy, but as a play the Hayes - Richardson - Robinson work could hardly be said to have achieved its desired ends. Episodic in movement, with long-continued periods of identical actions, the play succeeds in being neither entertainment nor argument.

"Mighty Wind's A' Blowin'" is a story of share-croppers and their eviction from their homes by grasping landowners. While the work is highly seasoned with propaganda, the play is essentially good theater and while it is heavy and largely devoid of comedy relief it is engrossing.

Lifted from the Theater Guild's production, "Parade," the group offered "Home of the Brave," a travesty of certain foreign conditions and how "The Furore" of the United States in the future would enforce the edicts to return to Amerindianism.

Metropolitan

"WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE." Columbia picturization of a story by Ethel Hill and Cedric Worth, adapted to the screen by Robert Riskin, starring Grace Moore, supported by Cary Grant, Aline MacMahon, Henry Stephenson, Thomas Mitchell, Catharine Doucet, Luis Alberni, Gerald Oliver Smith, Emma Dunne, George Pearce and Frank Puglia. Directed by Robert Riskin. Reviewed (return engagement) by T. Johnson Williams.

No especial interest need be attached to the narrative aspects of a picture starring Grace Moore, and, while "When You're in Love" further bears out that statement, it should be said that even if she did not sing, here would be an entertaining exhibit.

Running the gamut of musical literature from Cab Calloway's "Minnie the Moocher" to Franz Schubert's "Serenade," with each selection added in its proper place and with complete narrative justification, Miss Moore's vocalizing carries the show. As a current piece, she adds Jerome' Kern's new "Our Song."

Of the story, it may be summarily stated to revolve around the eternal question of career versus marriage. Cary Grant is opposite Miss Moore in the argument, which finally works out as easily as might be expected. Members of the supporting cast, especially Aline MacMahon and Henry Stephenson, turn in performances entirely sufficient unto the day.

As the auxiliary attractions are "Land of the Midnight Sun," a travelogue in color of Norway, and the day's news culled from releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels.

Menace and Star on Earle Screen

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, March 20.

Personal Observations: The honeymoon will be over when Jack Oakie appears at the swankyy Trocadero in a sweat shirt. Jean Harlow has a tiny mole where she wears that black "beauty spot." Lupe Velez, Carole Lombard and Arline Judge like to embarrass strangers with uncensored language. Which reminds me that the art of conversation in Hollywood is usually limited to the art. Since his boss (Louis B. Mayer) took him aside, Robert Taylor's taste in clothes has picked up.

JEAN HARLOW.

I think Joan Crawford, of all actresses, gets the most sustained kick out of fame. Nelson Eddy likes to dangle his left leg over chair arms. So Constance Bennett, who used to be "narc to see," has a press agent! No one is supposed to notice that Marion Davies stutters when she gets excited. Billie Dove's hair is now almost pure white, which makes her more beautiful. Most Hollywood nouveau riche are more impressed by an English butler than by their own salary checks.

As far as actresses go, I believe Gloria Stuart has the largest hands. Wonder if George Raft's high-waisted pants ever bind his adam's apple? Anne Shirley uses less maketup, on and off screen, than any girl I know. Most Hollywood hostesses delight in seating former husbands next to their former wives. Sally Eilers, so dumb a few years back, has developed a cryptic sense of humor. And it makes no difference how many foods are on his plate, Leslie Howard will manage to get a bit of each on every forkful.

Actors are poor business men as a rule, and Franchot Tone is apparently no exception, despite his Cornell diploma. He sank a thick bank roll in a California winery not long back, and now is in process of paying off creditors. In fact, his first trip away from Joan Crawford since their marriage was for the purpose of attending a creditor conference up North. And that leads to this story:

After driving most of the day, Tone halted for the night and retired early. About midnight a great clatter aroused him. It was the town fire alarm and the blaze was in a movie theater directly across the street. Like any old fire lover, Franchot hastened into his clothes, and thus arrived in time to see that one of his pictures had been showing in the theater and his name was on the marquee. Next morning the head man of his studio received a telegraphic description of the fire from Franchot, and it ended "Did you know my pictures were so hot?"

Bert Wheeler regards "Mummy's Boy" as his worst movie. The other evening he and Sally Haines were at my house for dinner, and they told about a recent motor trip to Wyoming. They paused to settle the hunger question in a village so small it had but one cafe, and as they were eating an excited woman rushed up and said, "Oh, Mr. Wheeler, I saw you in 'Mummy's Boy' last night." "Yeah?" snapped Bert. "Well, i'm not responsible. You'll have to go to the theater manager if you want your money back!"

Morning mail note: ". . . If, instead of filling the corner stone of the new Hollywood postoffice with so-called epic data, they had put there instead a picture of Jean Harlow (plus measurements), a paragraph of Mae West dialogue and a pint of prerepeal hootch, I think future generations would have an easier time figuring us out."

Little Jane Withers Has Title Role in Film of 'The Holy Terror.'

"THE HOLY TERROR." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original scenario by Lou Breslow and John Patrick, starring Jane Withers, supported by El Brendel, Joe Lewis, Leah Ray, Anthony Martin, Fred Kohler, jr., John Eldredge, Andrew Tombes, Raymond Brown, Joan Davis, Gloria Ray, Gavin Muir and Victor Adams. Music and lyrics by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst, with dances staged by Jack Haskell. Directed by James Tinling. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

As "The Holy Terror" is being unspooled, there comes to mind the opening lines of Thomas Bailey Aldrich's "The Story of a Bad Boy," wherein that author declared that that boy was not so very bad, after all, for he happened to have been a boy once himself. So here the holy terror is not bad at all—just a li'l gal filled with the enthusiasm of youth and possessing the not peculiar ability of frequently finding herself the unwitting cause of adultly embarassing situations.

It is not against Jane Withers, as the hoydenish daughter of the chief petty officer at a Naval air station, that one's critical blasts should be directed, but rather against the producers for the addition of music and songs that achieve no end other than to break the action of the drama by adding interludes of little essential bearing on the narrative.

Had these intrusive matters been eliminated, "The Holy Terror" would have been shortened by about 20 minutes, but the remaining footage would have revealed a fast-moving, juvenile drama—with the added embellishment of aerial maneuvers—which would have fulfilled every desideratum of family entertainment.

A "Mystery Plane."

Of course, the Navy has its "mystery plane" and, just as naturally, there are those who connive to get the data for sale to other governments. When they are about to succeed, the holy terror issues radio instructions which result in a mass parachute jump and the saving of the day.

Adult love interest is added by Anthony Martin, as a fight-loving gob, and Leah Ray, proprietress of a near-by eatery. Others in the company turning in good supporting performances include Andrew Tombes, as the commandant; John Eldredge, as the terror's father, and Raymond Brown, as an investigating Congressman. Comedy relief (variety adult) is admirably handled by El Brendel and Joan Davis, with Victor Adams, Gavin Muir and Gloria Ray adding the espionage angle.

But over all is the performance of Little Miss Withers. With sufficient story-book precocity, she handles the role like a veteran of maturer years, giving a finished performance without any trace of grown-upishness.

On the supporting bill are "Dental Follies," featuring songs and dances as dental anesthetics; "Blue Blazes," a Buster Keaton comedy of more than passing interest, and a release of "News of the Day."

Gas-Alarm Device Urged to Prevent Future Disasters

By the Associated Press.

Disasters like the New London, Tex., school explosion might be prevented in the future through development of a gas-alarm system, a Government official said yesterday.

Dr. David J. Price, dust-explosion specialist of the Department of Agriculture, outlined the possibility before departing for the scene to aid local investigators.

Efforts have been under way for some time to develop a simple alarm system which automatically would warn of the presence of dangerous concentrations of combustible gases, he said.

Students Augment Symphony Today

One-hundred of the outstanding musicians in Washington's high schools will join the National Symphony Orchestra for a part of its final students' concert at 11 a. m. today in Constitution Hall.

For several weeks these student musicians, selected to represent the various high schools, have been rehearsing under Capt. Don Paul McAdoo and the instrumental teachers in the high schools, and will be ready to give a finished performance when they play under Hans Kindler's baton Saturday morning.

The selections to be played by the augmented orchestra will be "Heart Wounds," by Greig, and "War March of the Priests," from Mendelssohn's "Athalia."

This final concert for students is the only one of that series to be given in Constitution Hall. Nine previous concerts this season have been played in the high schools.

Talk to Be Given By De Madariaga

The lecture which Salvador de Madariaga, former Spanish Ambassador to the United States, was to have delivered here last November, only to be postponed when he fractured his shoulder in London, will be given at the Hotel Shoreham tomorrow night.

His Town Hall subject is "The Future of Liberty." Members of the questioners' panel will be Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah, Gardner Jackson and Lothrop Stoddard.

Statesman, author and former professor of Spanish literature at Oxford University, Senor de Madariaga resigned his post as Spain's permanent delegate to the League of Nations last summer. His first public office was the Ambassadorship to Washington, to which he was appointed in April, 1931.

Hay, Weeds Used to Plug Grand Coulee Dam Leak

Grand Coulee Dam, Wash., March 19 (AP).—Hay and tumbleweeds were used by builders of the mighty Grand Coulee Dam today to stop a potentially destructive cofferdam leak.

Hay and weeds were mixed with clay and forced into the fissures of the steel pilings of the cofferdam. Huge pumps drawing 20,000 gallons a minute were keeping about even with the seepage.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Choose Your Weapon.

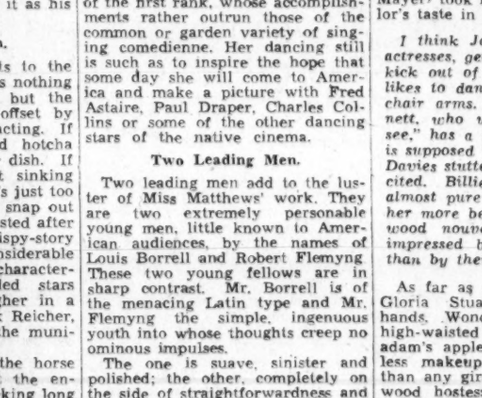
If you had to choose between giving an opponent a loaded and an unloaded gun, common sense would dictate the latter. It seems rather strange, therefore, that so many bridge players load the gun (figuratively speaking) before handing it over. A case in point:

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♣ | Pass | 2 N T | Pass |
| 3 N T | Pass | Pass | Pass |

West opened the Queen of Spades and declarer properly allowed it to hold the trick. West continued with the suit, and dummy won with the King. Seeing that a successful club finesse would yield nine tricks, declarer entered his hand with the King of diamonds and led the Jack of clubs. East won this trick with the King, and returned his last spade. Eventually South had to attempt to find a heart trick in order to make his needed total of nine, but by that time it was too late. West won the first heart with the Ace, and ran his remaining spades to defeat the contract.

South should have foreseen the necessity of establishing a heart trick in the event of an unsuccessful club finesse. The Ace of hearts was the gun in the hands of the enemy. To permit an opponent to win with it while the spades were unestablished would be safe; to let them win the Ace of hearts after the spades had been established, suicide.

Correct play would have enabled South to make nine tricks without difficulty. On winning the second trick with the King of spades, a heart should be led. If West takes his Ace he can never thereafter gain entry to run the spades. Figuratively speaking, the gun is handed to him while it is still unloaded. If West refuses to take the Ace of hearts, South abandons that suit and takes the club finesse. Regardless of subsequent play, South can run two spades, two diamonds, four clubs and a heart to make his contract.

Dean Signs After 2 Stormy Pay Sessions With Breadon

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

ORLANDO, FLA., March 19.

There's a boy down here who has been doing a man's job at third base for the Nats. Beardless youth has stepped into the toughest spot on the Washington Club without causing a ripple of regret at the passing of Ossie Bluege.

POVICH.

John Kelly Louis, of Gastonia, N. C., was on the spot a year ago when he returned North with the Nats to take up a position at third base in Griffith Stadium. Who was this young interloper who pretended to displace the wonderous Bluege at third base? It just wasn't being done—especially by raw rookie kids whose faces were still strangers to the razor and who properly belonged in prep school.

No kid with big league ambitions was ever thrust into a more ticklish spot. The great Bluege, personifying the very pinnacle of the third-basing art, his every action around the bag a poetic motion, had for 12 years inured Washington fans to no less than perfection in a third baseman.

* * * *

Thus it was that Griffith Stadium fandom could be excused for viewing this Lewis kid with suspicion, despite the glowing tales of his talents that emanated from Orlando in the spring of 1936. Bluege had spoiled 'em for all other third basemen. At young Lewis' first misplay, on their tongues would be the all-expressive: "Bluege would a-had it."

* * * *

And when Manager Bucky Harris, in a final strategical move before the opening game of the 1936 season, benched young Lewis, installed the veteran Bluege at third base, there was no surprise. Without Bluege, the Nats' infield was not the Nats' infield.

* * * *

Surely, Lewis had done nothing with the Nats in those eight games in which he figured at the fag end of the 1935 season. In that space, only one hit had bounced off his bat, and there was nothing in his fielding to distinguish him from just another minor leaguer. And he was not to be mentioned in the same exhalation with Bluege, the master.

* * * *

But Manager Bucky Harris had not forsaken the boy, Lewis, when his open-game lineup of 1936 called for the presence of Bluege at third. Lewis would be in there tomorrow, when the excitement of opening day had subsided; because Lewis admitted he was jittery at the prospect of playing before a crowd of 30,000, which included the President of the United States.

* * * *

And Harris hewed to his determination to put young Lewis in the Nats' lineup. And he did. And he was not disappointed. And Lewis was a fixture from the first day that he got the job. Clyde Milan, who had the lad down in Chattanooga, was staking his reputation as a connoisseur of talent on the boy. And he was not disappointed.

* * * *

The tall, apple-cheeked kid banged out a two-base hit against Lefty Grove the first time he saw him. And for the first two months of the season his batting average hovered around .380. He began to cause talk around the league. "Who is this kid, Lewis?" other clubs were asking. Around the circuit, hotel clerks who had been greeting Washington clubs for years, whispered cautiously: "Which one is Lewis?" The boy was causing quite a stir.

* * * *

He didn't maintain that terrific batting average. But he was no chump up there at the plate. And the extra-base hit was bouncing off his bat with consistent frequency. There was a lot of leverage in those long arms. And he was positively the best bunter on the Washington Club—one of the best in the league. It was with a very estimable .291 average that he finished the season.

* * * *

Before June 1, Washington fans took him into their hearts. All resentment toward the young interloper had vanished. They came to appreciate not only his hitting, but his very tolerable fielding skill. No Bluege was Lewis, perhaps, but no chump out there at third base, either. He would do. The kid was good. No doubt about that.

* * * *

Well, down here at Orlando again, the 21-year-old lad with the blush of youth in his cheeks, is a hard-bitten big leaguer on the ball field. He's synonymous with third base on the Washington Club—a $100,000 chattel as ball players are valued. He took the long hop from the minor leagues and landed on stardom with both feet. But he apparently doesn't know it.

"They say the second year up, is the toughest," he was saying today. "I sure am gonna try to make good."

Only Seven Finish Race; 33 Starters

Golden Miller Tumbles; Cooleen Is Second and Pucka Belle Third.

By the Associated Press.

Aintree, England, March 19.—Leaping Aintree's forbidding fences and brooks like a stag, and running light-footed as a fawn on the sodden flat, Hugh Lloyd Thomas' Royal Mail, a handsome black gelding, today won the ninety-ninth running of the Grand National Steeplechase.

A crowd estimated at a half-million, including the King and Queen, saw the four-and-a-half mile course take a terrific toll of the 33 starters, including six American-owned horses and Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, 8-to-1 favorite. Only seven survived the 30 treacherous fences.

Never farther back than fourth, Royal Mail was earmarked as the winner from the time he stepped confidently into the lead, shortly after completing the first circuit.

Although no mares won the classic in several generations it remained for one of them—Jimmy Rank's Cooleen—to give Royal Mail the only competition he had—except from the doggedly persistent riderless runner, Drim—in the last half mile.

Pucka Belle Third.

Another lady of the turf, E. W. W. Bailey's Pucka Belle, was third, ten lengths back of Cooleen. Then came Sir David Llewellyn's Ego, favorite until supplanted by the "Miller" a few hours before the race; R. Strutt's Crown Prince, A. Pilkington's Pencraik and S. Wilkinson's Don Bradman. The latter fell at the first jump but was remounted and finished a quarter-mile back of the leaders.

In winning the purse of $50,250 in slow time of 9:59.9, Royal Mail not only paid his backers—and they were legion until he ran two bad races a few weeks ago—100 to 6, but kept the Grand National "in the family." He's a half-brother of Reynoldstown, winner the last two years. Both were sired by My Prince, an Irish stallion.

Cooleen was a rank outsider at 33 to 1, while Pucka Belle was well backed at 100 to 6.

What Have You Acts Up.

What Have You first tried to break away from his rider, Bill Streett, of Warrenton, Va., and return to his stable. He then refused to leave the post with the remainder of the field. Finally, with two stablehands beating him with their hats, Streett got his mount under way after the field was 100 yards away. What Have You tumbled at the first hedge, injuring his leg slightly.

"I can't figure what got into him," said Streett, who was riding in his first Grand National.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Flying Minutes, a son of the 1925 Kentucky Derby winner, Flying Ebony, and just about the least liked of the Americans, made the best showing. With his 16-year-old American-born jockey, Bobby Hobbs, Flying Minutes looked like trouble for Royal Mail before he fell, five jumps from home. He had raced well up with the leaders from the start and followed Royal Mail over Becher's Brook the second time.

Aiken, S. C., March 19.—Patty Berg, the Minneapolis school girl, wound up her Southern campaign today by winning the Aiken Invitational golf tourney in easy fashion for her fourth title of the winter season. The sturdy redhead beat blonde Barbara Bourne, of New York, 6 and 4, in the 18-hole final round over the Highland Park course here.

Miss Bourne, who had starred in the role of upset maker in previous rounds of the tournament, was no match for Miss Berg today. She managed halves on the first two holes, but dropped behind on the third and never caught up. She was four down at the turn.

Miss Berg announced that she would not participate in forthcoming tournaments at Augusta, Ga., and Pinehurst, N. C. After playing in exhibitions at Columbia and Atlanta, she said, she will go home to resume her studies.

The winner played a steady game throughout, the 14 holes that the final match went. On each of the first nine holes she matched par, taking 37 strokes on the way out, while Miss Bourne with a six and a seven on her card, required 42.

Coming back, the Minneapolis youngster was one over par on the tenth, where she shot a six, and on the par three fourteenth, where she needed four strokes.

Miss Bourne, a comparative unknown in Southern tournament play, registered the biggest upset of the tournament when she defeated the Texas girl professional, Mildred Babe Didrikson, who won the qualifying medal, in the second

Hot Dogs Saved; Ardent Holdout Agrees to Terms

Miami, Fla., March 19.—A third major baseball holdout struggle ended today as Kid Armandito, star left-handed hot dog hawker, agreed to terms.

A few hours after the Yankees and Cardinals settled with Lou Gehrig and Dizzy Dean, the Stevens Catering Corporation, which purveys cigarettes, popcorn, peanuts and chewing gum at the ball parks and race tracks, announced Armandito had signed.

The controversy involved more serious matters than mere money, at least as far as the former Cuban featherweight boxer was concerned. Armandito, gesturing wildly to emphasize his broken-English remarks, came out flatly with these demands.

1. He be permitted to don a spotless white jacket and sell hot dogs every day (in previous years he shined pots and skillets on the off days).

2. He will not be forced to leave New York and work at the Narragansett race track (Armandito mentioned something about a girl in New York.)

3. Joe Stevens retain part of his salary each week so Armandito could purchase an automobile at the end of the season.

Cox Downed In Florida's $3,000 Golf

Smith-Haas, Picard-Ford Win; Sarazen Beaten in Quarterfinals.

By the Associated Press.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 19.—Four crack teams withstood a double assault of sub-par golf today to enter the next to last round of the $3,000 National Amateur-Professional Best Ball Tournament.

Lined up for the semifinal test over 36 holes tomorrow were Horton Smith, Chicago professional, and Fred Haas, of New Orleans, his amateur partner; Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Frank Ford, of Charleston, S. C.; Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Paul Leslie, of Baton Rouge, La., and Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, Long Island, and Mark Stuart, of New York.

Last year's winners—Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Mallie Reynolds, of Jacksonville—were shunted out of the running in the second round this morning, 2 and 1.

Their conquerors, Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Ray Lenahan, of Providence, R. I., were toppled in the afternoon by the Smith-Haas team. The score was 3 and 1.

Ky Laffoon and Carl Dann, jr., of Orlando, the medalist combination, came through in the morning with a 3 and 2 decision over Maurice Walsh, Hartsdale, N. Y., and Sam McDonough, of Jacksonville, but lost later to Hines and Stuart, 2 and 1.

Hines, member of the winning team in 1935, and Stuart ousted Willie MacFarlane, of New York, and Allen Ellis, of Brookline, Mass., 6 and 4, in the second round.

Both Picard and Ford played consistent golf throughout their 4 and 3 triumph over Paul Runyan, of New York and Charles Whitehead, of Plainfield, N. J., and later in their 3 and 2 victory over Denny Shute, of Miami, and Bill Stark, of Jacksonville.

The Cooper-Leslie team first disposed of Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., and Bobby Dunkelberger, of Sedgefield, N. C., 3 and 2, before walloping Wiffy Cox, of Washington, and Frank Strafaci, of Brooklyn, 4 and 3.

Bolton, Ailing, Leaves Camp for Treatment

Catcher Goes to Chattanooga for Ministrations to Shoulder, Will Be Out Week or 10 Days; Nats Face Cards in Grapefruit Opener Today.

By Shirley L. Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 19.—Complaining of a pain in the shoulder of his throwing arm, Catcher Cliff Bolton tonight received the permission of Manager Bucky Harris to place himself under the treatment of Lee Jensen, famed trainer of the Chattanooga club.

Bolton will quit the Nats tomorrow for a period of a week or ten days during which he will be at the camp of Chattanooga at nearby Sanford, Fla.

"Several years ago, I was troubled with the same soreness and Jensen cured it," said Bolton. "The pain has been with me now for several days, and I'm anxious about it. The sooner Jensen starts treating it, the quicker I'll be in the line-up."

Bolton, whose position as the Nats' No. 1 catcher is being seriously threatened by big "Shanty" Hogan, has displayed an apparent return to his hitting form but has worked only once in the exhibition games.

He denied that he had sought permission to return to his North Carolina home, declaring that except for the soreness in his arm he was physically fit.

Martin Not Amused.

Two days ago, Bolton had been so irritated by his affliction that he said he was on the verge of retiring from baseball. "At least I wanted to go home for a while," he said.

"I couldn't throw and it didn't seem as if I was getting in shape, but after my talk with Mr. Griffith, I feel better. He told me to take my time about getting into condition."

Bolton's preference for Jensen, the Chattanooga trainer, was laughed off by Griffith. "Ball players have funny ideas," said the Nats' owner. "A certain trainer helps them once, and they don't have confidence in any other. Everybody knows Mike Martin is one of the greatest trainers in the big leagues, but you can't convince fellows like Bolton of that."

Martin, who has been trainer of the Nats since 1912, managed only a weak smile at the news that Bolton would receive Jensen's treatments. The old fellow resents it.

Three veteran hurlers will be entrusted with the Nats' pitching hopes tomorrow when the Washington squad troops to Daytona Beach, 70 miles away, to do battle with the St. Louis Cardinals' gas house gang.

The game will mark the Nats' real plunge into the grapefruit league schedule. Sunday the club returns here to meet the Phillies and Monday they will be host to the Red Sox. A game each day until the team breaks camp on April 7 is scheduled.

Wasdell Angered.

Cocky little Jim Wasdell, who is convinced that he is a big leaguer, grumbled at the baseball fates when he learned he was among five rookies dispatched to the Chattanooga Club.

The others—Pitchers Bill Phebus, Harry Kelley and Frank Petticolas—and Catcher Jake Early, accepted with good grace their release to the Nats' farm by Manager Harris, but Wasdell for several hours was inconsolable.

"This is what comes of hooking up with the wrong club in the big leagues," muttered the young first baseman, for whom the Nats had paid the Minneapolis team $20,000.

"Looks like I'll be in the minors until Joe Kuhel breaks a leg.

"The worst break I ever got in baseball was when Washington bought me. This team doesn't need a first baseman, but there are others that do. Bill Terry wanted me for the Giants last summer, but they wouldn't sell me. The Phillies wanted me, too, and so did the Browns. There's a first-base job open on all those clubs, but I have to play in the minors."

Not until both Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris called him aside to picture a bright baseball future for the lad was Wasdell consoled and willing to go to Chattanooga.

"Why, we're going to bring you back as an outfielder the first time any of the regulars slump. And if we make a trade for Kuhel, the first-base job with the club will be a set up for you."

Wasdell agreed that he would be far more benefited by regular play with Chattanooga than by a long

Miami Beach, Fla., March 19 (AP).—Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, installed the New York Yankees 4-to-5 favorites today to repeat their 1936 American League pennant victory this season, as a result of Lou Gehrig's signing.

He made the St. Louis Cardinals 2-to-1 choice in the National League with the champion New York Giants third. He quoted the Chicago Cubs at 2½ to 1, and the Giants at 3½ to 1.

Odds on Cleveland were 3 to 1 and on Detroit 4 to 1.

'Good Boy' Stipulation Is Obstacle

Pay Is Thought to Be About $25,000 for Mound Star.

Hurler Takes Walk and Phones Wife to Cool Off, Then Signs.

By the United Press.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 19.—Dizzy Dean took a walk around the block tonight, heard what "the little woman" had to say and then put his name to a Cardinal contract a few minutes after he had stormed out of a conference with Owner Sam Breadon vowing for the steenth time that he was through with baseball.

The St. Louis pitching ace was believed to have signed for $25,000.

The actual signing climaxed a week of off-again, on-again tactics in which Dean "quit baseball" so often that nobody believed he wouldn't be out there in uniform when the season opened.

Dizzy opened the week with a firm statement that he was through, had asked for his release and couldn't think of remaining in the game when he couldn't get $50,000 annually. The Cardinals' management surprised him by accepting his resignation and forwarding release papers to League President Ford Frick.

Shortly after midnight Thursday Diz telephoned Breadon and agreed to accept the latter's terms, about half of $50,000. Diz came here today from his home in Bradenton all set to put his fist on the papers, but complications arose.

At mid-evening Dean stalked out of his second conference of the day with Breadon and said that although the money angle was fixed up he refused to sign a contract which contained a series of "you gotta do this" and "you gotta do that" clauses.

"Shucks, I don't know what's got into Breadon and Frisch (manager). They want me to agree to a lot of things, saying that I won't call some of the players bush-leaguers and a lot of nonsensical stuff like that. That ain't going to win no games and no pennant for the Cardinals."

Breadon, a few minutes later, echoed Dean's announcement that negotiations were "definitely off."

After delivering his blast, Dizzy took a turn around the block to cool off. He then decided to telephone Patricia, his wife, in Bradenton, with the result that a few minutes later he was meekly signing his name to a contract.

Zebar Wins 4th Straight Florida Race, Pays $14.50 Mutuel

Photo Duel For Second To Jub Jub

Wave of Upsets Marks Program at Tropical; Kawagoe Winner.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 19.—C. L. Croan's Zebar raced to his fourth consecutive victory in the featured Sunny Isles Purse of 1 mile here this afternoon. The gelded son of The Scout, coupled with The Queen, and closing at the lucrative odds if $14.50 for $2, withstood a long, grueling drive to win by a half length from the Medway Stable's lightly weighted Jub Jub. The latter earned the place in a photo duel with W. J. Sprow's Hasty Wire, the favorite. It was the sixth straight race in which the public choice tasted defeat.

Zebar is a remarkably improved gelding. He began his winning streak at Hialeah Park the middle of January when he ran in a claiming event for $1,500. Since then the bay campaigner has faced better horses each time. He ran the 8 furlongs of today's event in 1:38 3-5 to beat seven others of his age.

Joe Wagner gave the fleet and game Zebar a strong, well-judged ride to earn the lion's share of the purse. The former Greentree rider broke his mount with the leaders and sent him into a daylight lead in the first quarter mile. Hasty Wire then moved up in threatening manner, but Wagner's strong handling and Zebar's courage were not to be denied. Jub Jub, closing steadily, barely nipped Hasty Wire for secondary honors. Arcaro, on the latter, appeared to suddenly snatch up Hasty Wire, which seemed to be bearing in in the closing strides.

Alice Highland, a recent galloping winner, ran back to that effort to make it two in a row at the munificent odds of $15.40 for $2 in the 6-furlong opening event on today's card. The Kai-sang filly, facing nine others of her age, registered by four lengths over the favorite. Uncle Lester. Loyal Son was beaten two lengths for the place after showing the way in the early running. Alice Highland wore down Loyal Son and drew out in the stretch as Uncle Lester, slow to get started under Westrope and taken around horses, finished with a rally that was too late.

It is seldom that a horse trained by Hirsch Jacobs pays $33.10 for a $2 ticket, but that is just what happened in the second race. The 6-year-old gelding Kawagoe, freshened up since his poor race at Hialeah Park February 1, showed a brand of speed that carried him along in front and found him six lengths clear at the finish line. Regula Baddun raced forwardly and was up to take the place by a length from Dixie Princess. Many Moons, the favorite, broke last and had to make up a world of ground to finish fourth.

Body Punching and Footwork Go Arm in Arm in Fight Game

Norment Quarles Lets Us In on Secrets on Shufflin' About.

(This is the sixth in a series of boxing lessons by a puny pipsqueak, who couldn't knock over a rare Ch'ien-Lung vase even if he tried not to. Because of his lack of knowledge on the subject, the writer has turned to masters of the game for pointers.)

By Bill McCormick.

Body punching and footwork go arm in arm, if that isn't scrambling up the anatomy too much.

The feet are like a gun carriage on which your weapons are maneuvered into firing range.

For words of wisdom on footwork we will go to Norment Quarles, a lightweight product of the collegiate ranks who slides about the ring as smoothly as a drop of mercury on a glass-topped table.

Mickey Walker, whose tenacity and crowding tactics earned him the sobriquet of "Toy Bulldog," will serve as our example of what to do when you have set up your guns for heavy barraging.

While on the subject, we will discuss care of the hands and fighting psychology.

Remember in the first lesson you were told to advance the left foot slightly ahead of the right, with the left toe pointed slightly in? Your shadow boxing should have shown whether you maneuver best in the shuffle or skip or a combination of both.

Charles (Hobo) Williams, a local middleweight prospect who specializes in wallops to the midsection, practices on the heavy bag the business of tucking in his head and beating a tattoo on a midriff.

Norment Quarles, right, demonstrates on a sparring partner how to bang at the brisket. Norment has ducked under a jab, rammed a hook to the body and has a right ready to fly toward the same target.

Norment Quarles, the high-ranking lightweight, lends his educated feet to the lens to show the proper position of the legs. Norment has retreated to the ropes, but he still is on his toes and on balance.

Watch Your Feet.

The cardinal sin in footwork is getting the legs crossed. Not only does crossing the legs put one as off balance as a budget, but it is impossible to deliver a telling blow while the underpinning is cross-eyed.

The right leg is always held slightly bent. In this manner one can duck under punches, or fall back without getting off balance. Most boxers, including Quarles, advocate moving on the balls of the feet, but some of the old-timers, such as Kid Sullivan, insist one should stand flat-footed and pull back the left to retreat.

It stands to reason that the closer one is to his target, the easier it will be to hit the bull's eye. It is an old axiom of the ring that the better the fighters, the closer together they will be all the time. Carrying the guns to close range also saves much energy as it permits shortening of punches.

Once you have shuffled in close, it is a rule of wisdom to tuck the chin on the enemy's shoulder and whale away with both hands at the body. If the guard of your opponent is brought down, you may break a step, then shift to the head.

What to Do?

Walker, who was really just a little Dempsey, would bob and weave into close quarters, then tear into the midriff like a hungry leopard. From the body he would shift to the head, then back again. What can you do with a fighter like that?

Hitting should always be done with the knuckles of the hand laid as flat as possible across the objective. Really great punchers almost invariably have flat knuckles all the way across their hands. A ruler could be laid across every knuckle on either of Dempsey's hands. They were probably the greatest punching maulies in the business.

Even bad hands may be strengthened considerably. Chopping wood is fine for the fists. Gene Tunney had hands as tender as a $2.50 porterhouse steak, but he made them strong enough to win a title by chopping wood and playing with little rubber balls.

While strengthening his hands, Tunney carried a pocketful of these little rubber balls. In each hand he always had one of the pellets, which he kept squeezing. As quickly as one was worn out, another was popped in the hand from the reserve supply he carried.

Even as good as his hands were, Dempsey toughened them by soaking them in salt brine.

"No Brawn, Try Brains."

"When the brawn fails, try the brain," Benny advises. "For instance, in many of my fights I would floor an opponent with a right. He would come up groggy, and with but one thought in mind—'Watch that right.'"

When a man rose with that single thought in his mind, it was up to me to get it out of his head, so I could land another right and finish the business. I found a stiff left on the nose would drive every thought out of an injured fighter's mind, or at least so muddle up his thoughts that I would be able to land the right that put him down for keeps."

Leonard once was fighting Ritchie Mitchell, a tough opponent. Benny hopped into the ring and he and his manager, Billy Gibson, hied themselves to a neutral corner.

As soon as all eyes, including those of Mitchell, were focused upon them, Gibson slipped off Benny's bathrobe and Benjamin began to indulge in some very fancy shadow boxing, of a brand that only a Leonard can produce.

After a few moments of this, Gibson signaled Leonard to stop. As he drew on his robe, Benny whispered a question.

"Did Mitchell get an eye full of that?" he asked Gibson.

Upon being assured that Mitchell had been an eye-witness to the whirlwind boxing against a non-existent opponent, Leonard nodded with satisfaction.

"I knew Mitchell was licked from then on," Leonard will tell you today. He was right. Mitchell was so awed by the smooth shadow boxing that he hardly got his hands up for five rounds and finally bit the dust for keeps in the sixth.

Leonard was matched with a very tough puncher, one Soldier Bartfield. It was just after the rule had been passed regarding knockdowns, and retiring to a neutral corner instead of standing directly over a fallen gladiator.

As they were called to the center of the ring for instructions, Leonard interrupted the referee.

"Let's get one thing clear," he insisted. "When I knock Bartfield down, I must retire to the farthest neutral corner. Is that right?"

Of course, the referee could answer only "yes" and the idea that he was going to be dropped was planted so firmly in Bartfield's mind he could think of nothing but avoiding a knockdown wallop.

He did, but then so did Benny.

Western, St. John's Battle Today

Rival Fives Will Clash For Crown

Game Is Scheduled for Tech Gym; Suburban Teams Perform.

Supercharged for a head-on collision this afternoon at Tech High, red-clad Western High and St. John's Prep teams tapered off yesterday for the game which will decide the schoolboy basketball championship of the District. Seldom if ever before have the interhigh and prep school champions been brought together.

Seldom if ever, either, have more natural rivals battled for a title. In reaching the finals of the Metropolitan tournament, Western and St. John's have given the event a smashing climax such as it has never before experienced.

Western is anxious to regain the prestige it partially lost in the South Atlantic tournament when it was eliminated in the first round by Monroe Prep of Georgia. St. John's is anxious to solidify its high rating gained in the same tournament when it trounced the unbeaten defending champions, John Marshall of Richmond, 31-21.

The Georgetowners and the Johnnies are not alone, however, on the program. Promptly at 2 p. m., the flower of girl basketball teams of the Washington area, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and George Washington of Alexandria, start bouncing around the floor, seeking the schoolgirl diadem of the surrounding region.

At the finish of this picturesque spectacle comes the suburban high school title game in which Mount Rainier High and Bethesda-Chevy Chase tangle for that bunch of orchids. Whereas the girls' final finds Virginia lassies challenging the basket-tossing talent of nearby Maryland's finest young ladies, the male melee brings out a rivalry just as deep-seated.

Bolton Quits Camp For Treatments

siege of bench duty with the Nats, and tonight he took leave of the Washington club for the short journey to Sanford where Chattanooga trains.

The release of young Jake Early was predicated also on the belief that his value would be enhanced by regular duty with Chattanooga. Despite the promise the young North Carolinian had shown in the Nats' camp, he faced only infrequent duties as a reserve catcher and Harris was eager to watch his development.

The pitching trio who were pruned from the squad never figured seriously in Harris' 1937 plans. Phebus, the right-hander from Albany, was the prize of the lot but Harris was convinced that the fellow needed to develop a curve as part of his pitching repertoire.

Lanahan in Job Battle.

"He's got a nice fast ball—a good fast ball but he can't get by with just that," said Harris of Phebus. "He can't pitch that fast ball for nine innings. He's not big enough. If he comes up with a curve at Chattanooga, he'll be back with us in a hurry."

Kelley, the protege of Clark Griffith, was dispatched to Chattanooga without appearing even in one exhibition game. Tabbed as the possessor of a fast ball over which he had little control, Kelley, like the others, was released on option. Petticolas, noted chiefly for his resemblance to Primo Carnera, showed little in his third trial with the Nats.

Two more Nats are slated for release on April 1—Catcher Hal Lee and Outfielder Beverley Ferrell, who will go to the Nats' newly acquired Charlotte club. As drafted players, they must be retained until April 1.

Bridges in Hospital.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 19.—A hospital examination disclosed today that Tommy Bridges, right-handed pitcher of the Detroit Tigers, was suffering only from a strain in his side and not a hernia, as had been feared.

Sports in Brief

Garnering 11 championships, the Devitt A. C. won the Junior Amateur Wrestling Team Tournament, last night in the Y. M. C. A. with 105 points. The "Y" team scored 49 points. The Paul A. C., with 19 points, placed third ahead of Landon with three points.

Seven teams, the largest number in the history of the league, entered in the 1937 Government Baseball League last night. Federal Bureau of Investigation, D. C. Commissioners, Naval Air Station, Treasury, U. S. Marine Reserve, Bureau of Labor statistics, and the Federal WPA have entered teams. The league opens April 24.

Fred Buchholz was elected president; Judge E. M. Curran, vice president; J. Edgar Hoover, councilor; Joseph Leverton, secretary; Stanley Tracy, treasurer, and John Marozon, public relations officer.

Merrick Boys' Club, Southeast Community Center League winner, will meet the Trinity A. C., winner of the Georgetown Center tournament, tonight at Tech High at 7:15 in the opener of the City Community Center Basketball Tournament which brings together six teams.

Winners of the city's six Community Center League are meeting to decide the championship by elimination. In the second game of the night, listed for 8:15, Pike's Confectionery, East Washington champ, will meet the Knights of Columbus five, Roosevelt Center leader.

The Immaculate five defeated the official champs of the St. John's Parochial School Tournament by a score of 20-13. The Immaculate team kept the lead throughout the game. It was a great victory for the Immaculate Conception School for they had been defeated in the tournament.

Chicago.—Five teams were tied for first place in Chicago's thirty-seventh six-day bicycle race after 96 hours of riding tonight, with the Belgian combination of Omer Debruycker and Jean Aerts holding a big advantage in sprint points.

North Bergen, N. J., March 19 (AP). The feature wrestling bout at Columbia Park Arena here tonight ended in a draw when Gino Garibaldi, 218, St. Louis, and Stan Pinto, 214, Ravenna, Neb., collided head-on and were counted out after 24 minutes of rough-house grappling.

Madison, Wis. (AP).—The University of Wisconsin boxing team protected its perfect home dual match record tonight by defeating Villanova College boxers, of Philadelphia, 6 to 2. The Badgers took two bouts on forfeits. A crowd of 8,000 persons watched the show.

The following letter by Dr. James Radcliffe aptly describes the plight of the black bass in Maryland. In addition to being opportunely timed, it certainly goes hand in hand with the conservation activities, being pushed to a finish, to return the Potomac to all its former unpolluted glory.

It is hoped that Mr. Miller will reintroduce this legislation and keep his shoulder to the wheel until it is passed, so that Maryland may take her rightful place in regards to this sport.

March 16, 1937.

Hon. Harvey M. Miller, Chairman, Game and Fish Committee, House of Delegates, Annapolis, Md.

Dear Mr. Miller:

The black bass is widely recognized as one of the greatest of our game fishes. Millions of our people derive recreation, sport and pleasure in angling for black bass. Considering the cost per pound to angler and to commercial fishermen, it will be found that in equipment, boats and time the cost to the angler is several times what the commercial fisherman sells his catch for. It is therefore uneconomical and not to the best interests of the many against the few to permit the inclusion of black bass in the catch of the commercial fishermen. This point of view is overwhelmingly demonstrated by the following facts:

Thirty-nine States and the District of Columbia prohibit the sale of black bass at all times regardless of when taken.

Six States prohibit the sale of black bass caught within the State.

Despite the fact that Maryland now prohibits the sale between April 1 and July 31, inclusive, it is one of two States affording the least protection to black bass, and yet with adequate protection, Maryland could easily win the reputation of being one of the best fishing States for black bass in the whole United States—a reputation that would bring the State much wealth from anglers desirous of finding good bass fishing. The very fact that Baltimore City, Cumberland and Hagerstown, Md., have closed their markets to the sale of black bass clearly indicates what popular support such a law would have.

As president of the Izaak Walton League Regional Council for Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia and particularly on behalf of the chapters in Maryland and the thousands of your people interested in this subject, permit me to urge the introduction and passage of a bill prohibiting the sale of black bass at any time, making seasons and limits uniform, etc., and thus help to afford the protection which this fish, inch for inch, the greatest game fish in our waters, so justly merits. Very truly yours,

Navy Favored To Annex Rifle Crown Today

Fencing, Gym Meets to Help Close Middie Season; Other Events.

Annapolis, Md., March 19 (AP).—Navy was rated the favorite in the Middle Atlantic collegiate rifle tournament tomorrow at the Naval Academy range with the University of Maryland considered a "dark horse."

The rifle teams of 14 colleges and universities of East and South will compete. Each team will have five men and each contestant will fire ten shots at each position—prone, kneeling and standing.

Others entered are Georgetown, Columbia, Pittsburgh, Lehigh, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Lafayette, Cooper Union and Florida.

Fencing with the Princeton varsity and freshmen, Navy closes its home season of winter sports. The gymanastic team will also take part in the individual intercollegiate gymnastic championships in connection with which the Army and Navy teams will stage a dual match.

The final event of the winter card is the Intercollegiate Fencing Association finals, which will be held next Friday and Saturday in New York City.

High Schools Nines to Open Series April 9

The 1937 interhigh baseball series will be opened by Tech High and Woodrow Wilson when the teams from these two schools meet April 9 on the Tech diamond, the series scheduled released yesterday reveals.

Woodrow Wilson will be entered in the series for the first time, and remembering the beating the Tigers gave Western, defending champ, just before the season closed last year, the Wilson nine may be the team to beat.

Also for the first time Tech will be host on its recently reconditioned field.

The tennis schedule shows that Central and Tech will open the net series April 21. Eastern and Roosevelt will meet the same day. The selection of courts is still under consideration. The schedules follow:

May 4, Tech vs. Roosevelt, at Roosevelt; 7, Eastern vs. Western, at Western; 14, Tech vs. Central, at Central; 14, Eastern vs. Woodrow Wilson, at Eastern; 18, Roosevelt vs. Central, at Roosevelt; 20, Tech vs. Western, at Tech; 25, Roosevelt vs. Eastern, at Eastern; 28, Western vs. Woodrow Wilson, at Western.

Cunningham Runs At Indianapolis

Indianapolis, March 19 (AP).—Glenn Cunningham, king of American milers, has another chance tomorrow night to prove he's a better man at that distance than little Archie San Romani, of the Emporia (Kan.) State Teachers College, in the feature mile run of the fifth annual Butler indoor relays.

Entries Close Monday For Swim Title Meet

Entries for the annual District A. A. U. indoor swimming championships to be held in co-operation with the Shoreham Hotel, next Friday and Saturday in the Shoreham pool, will close Monday.

Listing eight men's events and six women's, the meet will bring together the best of local amateurs.

Hoover-Allen Showdown Is Due Monday

G-Men, District WPA Meet in Finals of A. A. U. Tourney.

Because you can't just keep the governmental bureaus out of the news, the FBI and WPA will be in the limelight, Monday night at Tech High, when the basketball teams of Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, G-Man Extraordinary, and George E. Allen, energetic District Commissioner, meet for the A. A. U. championship of the District and The Washington Post Trophy.

Trophy.

Shakespeare's flair for playing on words will be substituted by another game—that of playing on letters—as each club is hoping by virtue of an overwhelming victory, to crush their foe into such athletic insignificance that the loser's letters will be no more recognizable than those in alphabet soup.

Allen's team, WPA, resembling an Eastern High School alumni team, has gone through a sensational season, but no less impressive has been the record of the Federal agent's team. With both teams at their full strength, it appears to be a toss-up as to which will be the successor to the George Washington University Freshmen, 1936 tourney champs.

Spoldi Given Bad Drubbing By Armstrong

By the United Press.

New York, March 19.—Young Henry Armstrong, of Los Angeles, the "Black Spider" of the ring, tonight scored his second smashing triumph in a week in Madison Square Garden when he hammered out a one-sided victory over Aldo Spoldi, of Milan, Italy.

The kinky-haired West Coast battler conceded his black-haired opponent 8½ pounds and then proceeded to hand him his worst trimming in 17 fights in the United States.

Last week Armstrong made his first appearance in New York by knocking out Mike Belloise, recognized as featherweight champion by the New York State athletic commission, in four rounds.

Armstrong, according to the United Press score sheet, won eight rounds. He lost the first and fourth, the latter only because a pair of wild right hooks landed below the belt.

In the ninth round, Armstrong, featherweight titleholder in California and affiliated States, had Spoldi, lightweight champion of Italy, in bad shape. Aldo, his face a bloody mass from two cuts, climbed on his bicycle and succeeded in dodging the lethal lefts and rights which Henry hurled at him from every point on the compass.

30 of Virginia's Best to Vie Today in Middleburg Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 19.—Thirty of the speediest hunters in the northern Virginia fox-hunting territory are entered for the hunter point-to-point and the team race which will be staged by the Middleburg Hunt tomorrow.

The largest number is entered in the individual race, divided into three classes, light, middle and heavy weight, which starts at 1 o'clock. It will be 5 miles, more or less, as the crow flies. The Middleburg Bowl will be awarded to the winner of this.

Outstanding in this class is Health, the handsome bay belonging to Frederick Warburg, of New York and Middleburg, which captured the bowl last year. Mr. Warburg has two other hunters entered. Others who have made entries include Duncan Read, Miss Julia Gatewood, Miss Julia Whiting, Jimmy McCormick, Nancy and Barbara Iselin, Barry Hall, Miss Frances Frick, Walter Bowes, Stephen Clark, jr.; Mrs. Crompton Smith, Mrs. John T. Skinner, Miss Constance Regan, Harry Worcester Smith, Miss Laura Sprague, Mrs. Charles Sabin, Frederick Bowes, jr.; Benton Stables, Mrs. Armory Perkins, Harry C. Stokes, of Pennsylvania; W. Stanley Stokes, jr.; Mrs. George Sloan and Mrs. Henkley.

The second competition will require teams of two horses and riders to cover a distance of 3 to 4 miles. Partners will be drawn before the race. All hunters in this class must have been hunted by owner at least five times, but it is not necessary for owner to ride.

Judges will be J. R. H. Alexander, M. F. H., Loudoun Hunt; Sterling Larrabee, M. F. H.; Henry Taylor, of New York, and A. M. Chichester, jr.

The start and finish will be from the dairy barn on the estate of D. C. Sands, it was announced late this afternoon. The first race, the individual point-to-point, will start at 1 o'clock.

The team race will follow. The handsome Middleburg bowl will be awarded the best hunter in the individual point-to-point. Fifty horses have been entered in the two events.

17 Fights Open A. A. U.'s Ring Title Tourney

Guardsmen, Jewish C. C. Teams Co-Favorites; 70 Boxers Entered.

Seventeen battles tonight at Joe Turner's Arena will open the annual District of Columbia A. A. U. boxing championships at 8 o'clock tonight as the first round of the tournament gets under way with nearly 70 senior mittmen entered.

District National Guard, defending champion, coached by Matt Twomey, and the Jewish Community Center's group of fighters, coached by Jim McNamara, are expected to battle it out for team honors. The guards have had almost complete control on the championships for the last three years.

Undefeated Jimmy Willis, 125-pounder, and Buddy Lazear, 135-pounder, are entered under the J. C. C. banner and are looked upon as possible winners, with their reputations as knockout artists.

The Alexandria Boys Club will present two threats in the persons of Jimmy Mayo and Bobby Schwartz. Creighton Allen, of the Northeast Boys Club, will be a contender, as will Brookman, the Golden Glove lightweight champion, of the Police Club.

Steve Mamakos, Steve Thompson, Eddie Saugstad and Roy Crombie, members of the National Guard squad, will be attempting to retain the crown for a team made considerably weaker by the loss of Lou Gevinson and Murray Quanner, recently turned professional.

Pairings will be made this afternoon at the Washington Boys Club after the weighing-in at 2:30.

Prices, Labor Chief Problems Of Industry

Survey Finds No Reason to Expect Decline in Commodities.

New York, March 19—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Business men are faced with two important problems in making plans for the future, the course of commodity prices over the near and longer term and the effects of current labor trends on future employer-employe relationships.

"While inflation psychology has played a part in the rise in commodity prices during recent months, it should be recognized that the basis for this psychology has been established on a number of fundamental factors. By far the most important change in the commodity price situation during the past several years has been the considerable improvement in the statistical positions of numerous raw materials.

"There is no reason, therefore, to look for any important decline in commodity prices over the near or intermediate term. Some irregularity may develop until it is possible to gauge production prospects more clearly, but it is probable that substantially higher quotations, particularly for semi-manufacture and finished products, will be witnessed before the current business cycle runs its course, unless production restriction measures are dropped entirely and industry is given greater control over operating costs, particularly wages.

"The wave of sitdown strikes throughout the country shows no signs of abating. Because of the curtailment of automobile production as a result of these disturbances, aggregate industrial production this month will be moderately less than previously expected. Of greater importance, however, is the fact that the law enforcement agencies have been unable or unwilling to cope with the situation."

Wheat Slumps With Outlook For Heavy Crop

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 19.—In a steep downward plunge of prices, accelerated by many stop-loss selling orders, wheat dropped 3¼ cents a bushel, maximum, today.

Kansas and Nebraska reports of heavy snowfalls, suggestive of a big domestic wheat crop, were largely responsible, together with dearth of export demand for Canadian wheat, as well as an official denial that Argentina is planning to restrict wheat exports.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 2½ to 3¼ cents under yesterday's finish; May, $1.36⅛ to $1.36¼; July, $1.21¾ to $1.21⅞; September, $1.19⅝ to $1.19¾. Corn, unchanged to 1 cent lower; May, $1.09½ to $1.09⅝; July, $1.05½ to $1.05⅝; September, $1.00⅛ to $1.00¼; Oats, ½ to 1¼ off; May, 46¼, and rye showing 1⅝ to 1⅞ setback; May, $1.08⅝. Provisions results were 10 to 15 cents lower.

Bond Drop Checks Security Offerings

New York, March 19 (AP).—New security offerings fell sharply the past week as an unsettled bond market made underwriters hesitant in bringing out issues. A compilation today by Poor's Publishing Co. showed a total of $43,107,550 compared with $152,376,820 the preceding week, when there was one $130,000,000 public utility issue. In the comparable period last year offerings amounted to $124,706,572.

New financing has lagged behind last year's figures for several weeks while bonds have been sliding.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Stock Tone Improves in Less Active Trading; Government Bonds Continue Decline.

New York, March 19.—Stock trading closed the full sessions of the week on a firmer tone, but bonds failed to carry through with the help rushed to them yesterday and the previous day. Stock turnover failed to reach 2,000,000 shares. Commodities were mostly lower. May wheat closed 2⅝ cents lower at 136¼ cents a bushel. Cotton dropped about a dollar a bale.

Revelation of the extent of official support for the Government bond market this week probably had something to do with the fresh outbreak of selling, for since they have seen the promised supporting point of the 2½ per cent yield basis broken, banks no doubt feel that the future of the market is still a bit uncertain. At any rate, prices for virtually all maturities weakened. Stocks found buyers at the lower prices reached on the sharp decline yesterday, and they continued to enjoy the actual favorable news of industry and the prospect for greater activity inherent in the course along the business cycle now being traveled.

Railroad stocks were the best group, and their ability to rally, after an indifferent to poor opening, encouraged other sections. Traders seemed to be even less anxious to deal than they were yesterday, but it was easier to find bidders, possibly because a short interest may have accumulated. In the late trading Steel took the lead and climbed about two points above its low price of the morning.

Some dabbling in the motor shares took place, on the ground that a Chrysler strike settlement must be nearing. Copper stocks were pushed ahead a little, as fears of an all-'round break in metal prices might take place were dissolved.

Official Support.

This week's statement of the Federal Reserve System held unusual interest, in view of the tax date financial operations and the break in the United States Government bond market. It was generally supposed that the Reserve banks, and perhaps the Treasury, were heavily supporting the market, and that indeed proves to have been the case—perhaps on even a grander scale than had been imagined. Selling of Government bonds converged on the long-term 2½s per cents, and it was in the long-term market that the Reserve System put in its heroic licks.

The system statement shows that $56,000,000 of long-term bonds were purchased, but the support was given without any net increase in Reserve bank holdings. Thanks to the fact that the system held large amounts of notes and bills, maturing at this time, it was a simple matter of bookkeeping to allow those investments to run off without replacement, but to make up the total of Treasury investments by the purchase of the long terms.

Tax Miscalculation.

That was not the extent of official help. Much to the surprise of every one, the Treasury last night called for $105,000,000 of its deposits with member banks, the funds being needed to take care of the excess of Treasury spending over collections at the tax date. Quite apparently the Treasury bought large amounts of Government bonds, for its deposits with the Reserve banks fell $99,000,000, and the shrinkage, which was expected to have been made good by tax collections, had to be met in the first-mentioned way. In other words, the Treasury seriously underestimated tax payments in the first quarter.

Underestimate of tax collections for this year raises two important points. One is that recent assurances from Congressional leaders that plenty of money is on hand and that no more taxes is necessary. The other is that the Treasury's promise of no further new borrowing, aside from discount bills, will need to be made may require elaboration. If tax collections fall substantially below estimates, new bond issues, additional taxation, or reduced expenditure are forecast. Few will believe that the latter alternative will prove to be the answer.

It is perhaps too early to rush to the conclusion that the unsound tax measure (bad on its merits) which is the undistributed profits tax, is proving to be a smaller revenue gainer than the high hopes of the Administration indicated. That is nevertheless the indication of the small March 15 tax payments, for corporation earnings and individual salaries, wages and income from other sources are proving to have been much higher in 1936 than had been supposed.

Odd Lots.

Stock symbol changing in the interest of advertising goes on, but United States Steel has not yet asked for STEEL as a substitute for X. Today's offering was HOE for HOO as a sign for R. Hoe & Co. 6½ per cent bonds. That was a natural that might have been made long ago . . . Until its recent setback, Sloss Sheffield sold at as high an earning to price ratio as any of them. Net income last year turns out to have been $4.14 a share, which means at the recent top price a ratio of 50 times earnings—high even for these exciting days of inflation and speculation in metals. This year Sloss undoubtedly will earn a great deal more than last year—how much more is a matter which promises to keep the sensitive market for the stock just as nervous as ever. . . . Disturbance in the bond market this week promises to slow down new offerings for a while.

Brokerage View.

Extract from brokerage house market letter: "It is extremely interesting to see Secretary Wallace and other sponsors of inflationary activities discuss "dangerous delusions." The timeis still quite distant when there will be general realization of how dangerously delusionary all attempts to frustrate natural laws and improve the genus homo by tearing down the strong for the sake of the weak masses really are, but such statements as now are coming from the Brain Trusters indicate growing realization that alibis will be necessary some day."

Railroad Earnings.

The first few railroads to report monthly earnings usually give a good indication of how the wind blows. The first five roads to show February earnings report a rise of 18.1 per cent in gross revenues over last year and a gain of 26.3 per cent in net railway operating income. For the first two months the increase in net amounts to 61.3 per cent. The improvement is especially gratifying in that, despite higher costs and lower freight rates and passenger fares, the gain in net is maintained at a higher percentage.

Price of Lead Cut Third Time in Week

New York, March 19 (AP).—The price of lead was reduced $5 a ton today, marking the third cut of similar amount within a week. Producers quoted the metal at 7 cents a pound, New York, and 6.85 cents, East St. Louis. Before the market started to slip early this week, the price of lead had been boosted sensationally as a result of several months of heavy buying for domestic and foreign account. On this upward flight the quotation reached 7.75 cents a pound, the highest levels recorded since April, 1929.

Parade of Youth

The Weekly Newspaper for Boys and Girls

Highlights

of this week's issue of "Parade of Youth," an 8-page section of Sunday's Washington Post

Deeds Make News

Yes, Sir! Deeds . . . as well as names . . . make news. And this week, Parade of Youth tells the stories of enterprising boys and girls whose deeds earned them headlines. Gladys Neal sold vegetables to earn her way through school Billy Godwin was made an editor on a great London newspaper. Bryon Moe set three national speed skating records. Dot Munson won trophies in motorboating. Read about them in this week's Parade of Youth.

"I Aim to Be . . ."

What are your plans for the future? Airplane pilot? School teacher? Lawyer? Nurse? Parade's column entitled "I Aim to Be . . ." tells what young people all over the country are doing in the vitally important business of selecting and training for their chosen careers.

Letters to the Editor

We venture to say that no other "Letters to the Editor" have more vitality, punch and real interest than do those that appear in this column every week in Parade of Youth. It's the one place where boys and girls can have their say about things without being interrupted or censored. Don't miss the letters in this week's column!
